Happyish Deck

Funny, comforting, super practical wisdom for when life gets dark—or just annoyingly complicated.

YOU ARE NOT A SAD STORY.

Your story might have sadness—it might be a real tear-jerker, actually—but it is not just a sad story. No story is just the saddest parts, or just the happiest parts. And no person is, either. You are not defined by the worst (or best!) things that have happened to you. Even if your story has some bone-crushingly sad plot points, you are not a sad story.

THAT IS A PERSON.

Every person you meet today—even the most deeply annoying one—is a person. To someone out there, they are the best person that has ever existed, a favorite person amongst all the people on Earth. Remember that the next time someone is rude or inconsiderate or even slightly irritating: this is someone's favorite person.

HAPPINESS IS NOT A PURSUIT.

Actual facts: studies have shown that the pursuit of happiness can actually make you less happy. Today, remind yourself that happiness is not a location you arrive at, a place to check your bags and stay indefinitely. Today, embrace happiness as a temporary state of being like any other. When you feel it today—and you will—enjoy it for as long as it lasts, and wish it well until you meet again.

HEALING TAKES TIME.

This is either reassuring or annoying, depending on the kind of day you're having. You can't rush your wounds into becoming scars. Think about where you've been—your deepest hurt—and where you are now. Could you believe that you're right on time?

LIFE IS NOT A SELF-IMPROVEMENT EXERCISE.

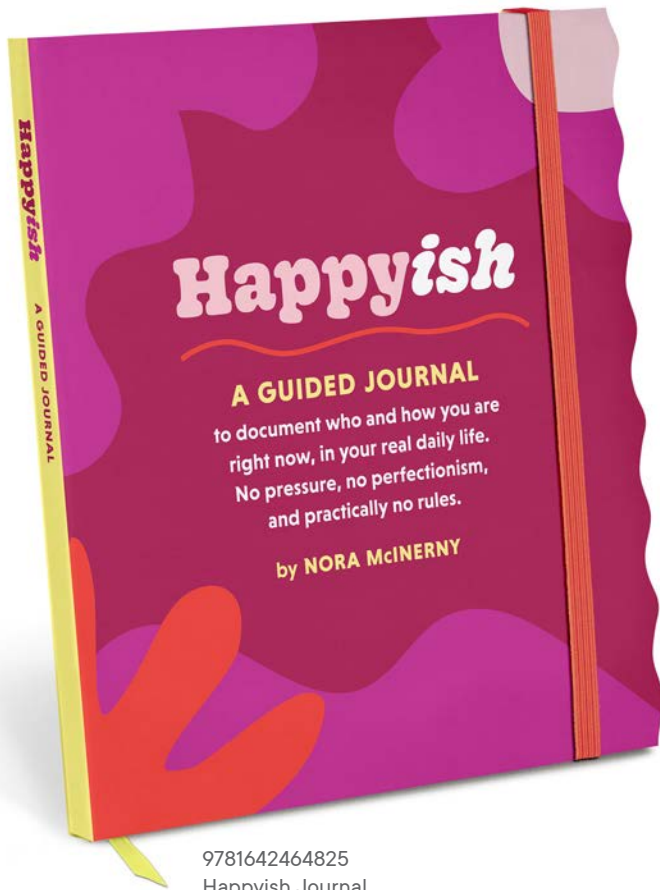

You do not exist to race on a treadmill to nowhere in search of optimization and advancement. You do not have to see your setbacks as a set-up for a comeback, or alchemize your struggle into something shiny. Not everything is a life lesson meant to turn you into your best self. Some things just suck.
