The first edition was published in December 1967, two months after Guevara was hunted down and killed in Bolivia, but the Spanish originals of his writings and speeches were often incomplete, and the English translations suffered from the conditions of the revolutionary times. A 2000 edition not only cleaned up the first collection, but also added documents that had been translated and published subsequently. It is that augmented edition that is reprinted here. Among the items are Fidel's trip to New York, mobilizing the masses for the invasion, Cuba's economic plan, Cuba and the Kennedy plan, Camilo Cienfuegos, interview by Mrs. Josie Fanon, farewell letters to Fidel and to his parents, and Vietnam and the world struggle for freedom.
