

The Flair Range.

Requiring no electricity and no coffee pods, the Flair Espresso Maker is one of the simplest and environmentally-friendly manual espresso machines on the market. And it's now available in three different styles: Classic, Signature Chrome, and Signature Black, with the choice of the Single or the Bundle.

To brew, boiling water is added to the brewing cylinder, which sits on top of a portafilter filled with freshly ground beans. The boiling water is then forced into contact with the fresh grounds by lowering the manual lever, over a period of about 25-45 seconds. This generates between 9-16 BAR of pressure, resulting in a beautiful, professional-quality double shot of espresso with layers of thick crema on top. The removable brew head and body makes the Flair easy to clean, easy to disassemble, and easy to take with you as a portable espresso maker.

To add to their Classic red and black design, Flair recently released their Signature range editions, to provide customers with a more modern and fresh look. Just like their predecessor, the Signature Chrome and the Signature Black are made from high quality, durable materials, and feature the same portable and compact design. The Signature Chrome features a full chrome body, with a copper-plated portafilter base, and the Signature Black features a modern, matte black finish with the copper-plated portafilter base. Each Signature Series Flair will also include the newly designed Easy-Clean Portafilter. This premium portafilter features a removable spouted bottom that makes cleaning easier and faster. After brewing, just remove the spout, rinse from both ends, and set aside to dry.
