Michelle Carvo Apple iPods, such as Nano and Touch, come with a variety of features thanks to the addition of apps and games. However, the main feature of the iPod is the ability to play songs. Playing these songs is easy enough, but making the lyrics of the show on the iPod a little more difficult. By following a few specific steps, you'll be able to add and do the texts show on your iPod. Manually add lyrics to each song on your iPod that you want the lyrics to be shown during the game. Unfortunately, iTunes doesn't do this automatically for you, so you'll need to add lyrics by opening iTunes, clicking on the song right and selecting Get Info and then Lyrica. Enter the text or copy/paste them, and then click OK to save them. Re-synchronize the songs you've added lyrics to your iPod. You can do this by selecting a file and dragging it onto the iPod logo on the left side of the menu. Start the iPod app on your iPod. Choose a song to play on your iPod. Tap the center of the screen while playing the song on iPod Touch. Click the Center button on classic or Nano. The lyrics will now be shown on the screen. Click on the center of the screen or the Center button again to make the texts disappear. You know these annoying lyrical sites that instantly try to freeze your computer back into the Stone Age? Well, the next time you just got to remember the texts to Air Supply's All Out Of Love (see above), try LyricWiki, a large and growing database of over 200K lyrical pages. You can search by the name of the artist or song; I wish they had more intuitive search that went out and grabbed partial song lyrics as well. You can also find a lot of background information, news, and interesting music comments here - worth a look. LyricWiki Featuring the power of language, hip-hop poets help shape our world and pull us closer into them. Rap has released so many quoting lines and clever lyrics. From time to time, however, you will hear a rhyme that makes you chuckle, shake your head or bury your face in the palm of your hand. Sometimes it's a whole verse. Or a whole song. These things happen. We can't shrug off the crappy lyrics, so we might as well laugh at them. From math misfires to failed puns, here are 25 of the worst rap lyrics: Adger Cowans/Getty Images Rule nombre uno... Notorious B.I.G. is one of the greatest lyricists of all time, and it's not polite to say bad about the dead. Let's just say everyone in the studio during the recording was so completely fascinated by Biggie's stream that they overlooked his wobbly Spanglish on 10 Crack Commandments. Ian Gavani/Getty Images There's no need to lie, folk, why do you sleepin' wit I have eyes closed? Maybe Timbaland is trying to educate us on the distinction between sleeping with his eyes closed and sleeping with partially or completely eyes, medical medical known as lagophthalmos. Maybe not. Johnny Nunez/WireImage/Getty Images I can double my density from 360 degrees to 720 instantly. Obviously, Canibus slept through third grade when they switched units of measurement. Dr. Billy Ingram/WireImage/Getty Images Thirty-eight are spinning like the sun around Earth. Speaking of sleep in class, it seems Jay and missed basic astronomy in the science class. Johnny Nunez/WireImage/Getty Images NA in the Bronx call me Lex the reason I push Lex and I rock a Rolex and I have a living room on Lex Let's Math: Uptown Baby was released in 1998. It was probably recorded a year earlier. What are the chances that Corey Gunz ghostwrote this line for him to appear at the age of 10? Ken Weingart/Michael Ochs Archives/Getty Images Never let me slip because if I slip then I slipin. You already know that Dr. Dre is one of the greatest hip-hop producers of all time. But did you know that he is also one of the greatest inborn emcees of all time? Who else could slip by saying: Never let me slip? Matthew Simmons/WireImage/Getty Images My item only costs five microphones a 12-song LP, it's thirty-six microphones (a)Apparently, Redman's calculator is a little off. Notice how he ad-libs his math for accent. It's akin to faceplanting while taking a selfie. KMazur/WireImage/Getty Images Don't try to treat me as I'm not known my apology, you're in astrology Cause I, I'm trying to do it on Uranus You probably think: Kanye, you're a genius. You probably know something about astrology that we don't know. And that's why you're the one who makes millions out of music. If you think about it, you're probably Kanye West. John Super/Getty Images You're the child of Destiny You're my baby with a child from Destiny's Child You know Jay had to try this at least once, given his wife's background. Luckily, he realized how stupid it sounds, and never tried it again. Jeff Kravitz/FilmMagic/Getty Images When you take a sip you buzz like a hornet Billy Shakespeare has written a whole bunch of sonnets. Cut out the LFO for some slack. These guys graduated from the Institute of Vanilla Ice Hip-Hop and decided to try their hands in a random association of words. John Rickard/FilmMagic/Getty Images Sometimes you all get criminal crime, dirty dirty but those with tiny hiney they get whiny. Someone had to tell Cam that this choppy rub'a rhyme is thingy thingy stupid. Bennett Raglin/BET/Getty Images for BET I'm hungry for cheese as a hungry, hungry hippo. It's a funny line. You can imagine how hungry he is for cheese (aka money), how many times he repeats the word hungry. Another hungry and we're saying I'll eat the oil dollar bill at the moment Chelsea Lauren/Getty Images If you don't get my money back muir f e n or my muir f e n doping, you can forget to forget Christmas baby because you don't even gon see the New Year. This line only makes sense if you plan almost for the calendar year ahead. Since it's not clear what calendar P uses, it practically neutered the threat. Gary Gershoff/Getty Images It's like a fee, fi, an enemy, a fum, I smell the blood of jealous punk. Here Prodigy turns into nursery rhymes. Hiroyuki Ito/Getty Images The first family will gradually lift that as well up as gravity. Gravity is not what Lil' Glory thinks it is. Sir Isaac Newton must be turning in the grave. John Rickard/FilmMagic/Getty Images D.D.T. Beh, I can go in a few hours. Let Parlae hit, together we are like twin towers. One of the qualities of great songwriters is the knowledge that is sacred and unfunny. No matter how tempting, there's nothing funny about the twin towers. Tim Mosenfelder/Getty Images I like black, white, Puerto Ricans or Haitians, like Japanese, Chinese or even Asians. As for Genga, Asian is a separate nationality. Jared K. Tilton/Getty Images I'll break it for you now, baby it's just, if you're a nymph, I'll be a nymph. Aside from the gender issue, the funny thing is that 50 later tried to sell the Magic Stick condom brand. He failed more than Kevin Federline's rap career. Johnny Nunez/Getty Images Thirty-two grams of raw, cut it in half, get 16, double it once three. We got 48, which means a lot of cream divide profits by four, subtract it by eight We'll go back to 16... Foxy Brown's verse on Positive Action holds the world record for the worst math in song. Some believe that Nas ghostwrote this line, making it even more fun. Chris Polk/FilmMagic/Getty Images Got Bill in the Mouth like I'm Hillary Rodham. It's probably one of those things you tell your friends when you're drunk and they laugh politely. They don't want you to feel insecure about how drunk you really are. Gilbert Carrasquillo/Getty Images Young, black and famous, with money hanging an anus. That's the kind of money you wouldn't want to touch before breakfast. As your mother used to say: Go wash your hand! Hayley Madden/Redferns/Getty Images You can get more money than I do, but you don't have the skills to eat nea like me. He probably meant it as a metaphor. However, it sticks out every time you listen to the second round of KO. Hayley Madden/Redferns/Getty Images Now you know I'm the queen of Miami. All those loud talk, Lyrin, except that s't for your mom. Похоже, Бля, бля-бля, бля-бля-бля-бля, я, как а-а-а (а-а) ОК (ОК), Whassup (whassup) Заткнись! Current lyrics. John Rickard/FilmMagic/Getty Images I'm the hot reason I fly/ You don't cause you no. Mims? He had a No.1 hit somehow. Dropped the album somehow. Headliners shows somehow. He has reached these great great with a song called This Is Why I'm Hot, but he could never effectively explain why it's hot and I didn't. Joseph Okpako/Redferns via Getty Images Trayvon Martin, I never miss my goal. Too much. Too rude. It's too early. He made it worse by trying to clarify what he meant. Speaking I remind people that if you are a black person or a person of color, for that matter in this country, you have to be accurate does not make sense. I just don't. Lyrical dance is a dance style that combines elements of ballet and jazz dance. Lyrical dance tends to be a little more fluid than ballet, and also somewhat faster - though not as fast performed as a jazz dance. Lyrical dance is also somewhat smoother and a little faster than ballet, but not as fast as jazz. George Balanchine remains the most influential and widely observed of all the choreographers of the 20th century. Asked by the interviewer what his dance moves were, he said, Nothing special. This statement probably shocks many, does not mean that the dance lacks emotion; he suggests that his view of dance is that it is determined by the logic of movement, not by emotion or expression. Interestingly, one of the dominant composers of the 20th century, Igor Stravinsky, made a similar statement that music expresses nothing. Unsurprisingly, some of Balanchine's most memorable ballets are set to Stravinsky's music. No one meant that art should have no emotional effect. They insisted, however, that art did not exist to encourage listeners and viewers to react emotionally - if that was a consequence, well, but art existed as a formal structure. This is best expressed in this structure. Both jazz dance and lyrical dance come from different rooms. Jazz dance, although it often has a formal choreographic basis, is highly emotional and improvisational. The way a jazz dancer reacts to music or storytelling in one performance is likely to be different from her reaction in another, simply because her emotional reaction, which arises at the moment, will never be quite the same twice. The lyrical dance is also focused on the emotional reactions of the dancer, rather than on the basic formal choreographic structure. Although the choreographic structure often exists, it serves more as a general guide than as a recipe for specific dance moves, which, once mastered, will be very similar from one performance to the next. The lyrical dancer uses movement to express strong emotions such as love, joy, romantic desire or anger. Lyrical dancers often perform to the music with lyrics. The lyrics of the chosen song serve as inspiration for movements and expressions The music used for lyrical dance is usually emotionally charged and expressive. Musical genres used in lyrical dance include pop, rock, blues, hip-hop, ethnicity and and music and various forms of urban contemporary music, such as minimalism. The music of minimalist composers Philip Glass and Steve Reich is often used by lyrical dance troupes. Since the 1980s, various African musical genres, such as Soweto's music, have also been popular. Powerful, expressive songs are often used in lyrical dance to give dancers the opportunity to express a number of strong emotions through their dances. Movements in the lyrical dance are characterized by fluidity and grace, with the dancer smoothly flowing from one turn to another, holding the final steps as far as possible. The jumps are exceptionally high and soar, and the turns are fluid and continuous.
