

JULIE

It was the first totem pole to be raised in that community in 100 years and it was just because this guy - I guess he was a fisherman - would wander around, you know, from bar to bar, talking about how he had this hole in his heart. That's how he put it. He said, he couldn't sleep. He would just lie there in bed because of this hole in his heart. Sorry. You don't even want to hear this.

EVERET

No. No, no. Tell me. Tell me.

JULIE

Well... The community got together and they found the guy a log. The guy had never carved a thing before in his life. It took him five years. I flew there for the raising of it and it was just this tiny, tiny island off of the coast. The whole town was there. It was... It was incredible. I mean, you just couldn't look at it without crying.

EVERET

I'd love to see that.

JULIE

Well, it's there for you.

EVERET

Do you feel like you chose?

JULIE

What do you mean?

EVERET

I don't know. Chose your life. Said, "This is the thing I'm gonna do. These are the things I want." Not necessarily because you were good at this one thing or because everybody told you that that's what you should want, because everybody said that's who you were. I don't know. I mean, like this artists' grants work. How did you know that's the thing you were gonna be passionate about?

JULIE

Who said I was passionate about it?

EVERET

No, no, don't do that. Don't joke. You know, I've been thinking about this monastery I missed seeing in Hong Kong. Like that's an important thing.

JULIE

Then you should go.

EVERET

I want to go to Alaska. I do. I wanna see that totem pole. I wanna see that thing that felt like a hole in the centre of that guy. That thing he needed to make just so he could sleep.

JULIE

Maybe they went back to the house.

EVERET

Do you wanna get some coffee?

JULIE

No.

EVERET

I don't know, get some coffee or something.
I just... I thought... It's funny.

JULIE

What is?

EVERET

This.

JULIE

Everett. You know, I... I can't. So...
Good night. Good night.
