

EXCLUSIVE PARTNERSHIP!

We've been scouring the world for extraordinary artists and artisans who make exceptional goods, and we fell in love with A Rum Fellow the moment we met them.

A Rum Fellow is the dynamic London-based studio of husband-and-wife team Dylan O'Shea and Caroline Lindsell. An unrelenting commitment to integrity, beauty and the art of the hand drives everything they do. They create original designs, then master craftspeople in Guatemala handweave the running yardage and brocade panels using age-old techniques.

The results are nothing short of spectacular.

And now they're available in the U.S. exclusively through Schumacher.

HANDWOVEN BROCADE PANELS

These exquisite brocade panels are simultaneously woven and embroidered entirely by hand by master Maya craftswomen in Guatemala. These textiles are ethically produced on traditional backstrap looms, a method that has been handed down in the local community for centuries. Slight variations are part of their inherent beauty and tell a part of their distinctive journey.

Falseria is a traditional technique for which warp threads are lifted and lowered by hand as the weft on the shuttle is passed through. It's been practiced by Maya weavers since the Spanish first introduced it in the 16th century.
