

Contributors

BAGUS ARYO is the Deputy Director of the National Islamic Economy and Finance Committee (KNEKS), Indonesia. He also teaches at the School of Environmental Science (Master of Disaster Management), Universitas Indonesia. His primary research and practice interests, with more than 20 years' experience, are microfinance, community development, corporate social responsibility, and social policy. He has extensive practical knowledge as a consultant for national and international agencies, including for ministries in Indonesia, and international and local profit and non-profit organizations. Bagus Aryo received his doctoral degree from the University of Melbourne, Australia, and has been appointed Secretary General of Indonesia Microfinance Expert Association (IMFEA).

BUI THANH MINH is a lecturer at the University of Social Sciences and Humanities (VNU Hanoi). He also serves as Head of Policy Research and Discussion Affairs at the Private Sector Development Office (Committee IV), which belongs to the Vietnamese Prime Minister of the Administrative Reform Advisory Council. Bui Thanh Minh received his doctoral degree in social work at Vietnam National University, Hanoi, and his Master's Degree in Public Policy at Fulbright University Vietnam. His research focus on social welfare, public policy, and sustainable development in Vietnam.

DANG KIM KHANH LY, PhD is a main lecturer at the University of Social Sciences and Humanities, Vietnam National University, Hanoi (VNU-USSH), where she is Dean of the Faculty of Sociology. She gained her Bachelor of Arts in Sociology from VNU-USSH (2001), a Master of Sociology from VNU-USSH (2006), and a PhD in Sociology from VNU-USSH (2017). Dang Kim Khanh Ly holds a social work certificate from a training course in the SWEEP Program at San Jose State University, USA (2015). Her research mainly focuses on social work in hospitals, social work with disability, and vulnerable groups and sociology in health care. (Orcid: 0000-0002-3938-8060)

FABIO SAINI has been a lecturer since 2012 in the International Master Program in Public Health—Global Health, Faculty of Public Health (and previously at the School of Global Studies), Thammasat University. He has more than 30 years of professional experience in rights and equity approaches to health and development in Southeast Asia, Sub-Saharan Africa, Australia, and Europe. Fabio worked for the NSW Department of Health in Australia, first in Multicultural HIV/AIDS Services and later as an Access and Equity Advisor (1989–1996). After moving back to Europe, he worked as a consultant for UNAIDS and the European HQ of the World Health Organisation in Copenhagen, Denmark (1996–98). For the next few years, he worked in Sub-Saharan Africa to promote the rights-based integration of SRHR and HIV programs (1999–2002). Fabio subsequently became Deputy Regional Director, and then Regional Director for Asia and Near East, for EngenderHealth, based in Bangkok, Thailand (2002–2007), where he is still based.

HEONG HONG POR is a lecturer at the School of Social Sciences, Universiti Sains Malaysia (2019 to date). She was a visiting research fellow at the University of Malaya (2015–2019) before joining USM. In addition to academic work, she is involved in several community research projects, including a project on Cambodian woman workers in Malaysia (2015–2016) and an initiative to collect oral histories of witnesses of the 1969 riots in Malaysia. Several transnational grants support her work, including the Society for the History of Technology (SHOT) Small Grant (2018), SEASREP Research and Travel Grant (2017–2019), and Chiang Ching-Kuo Foundation Research Grant (2022–2023). Heong Hong Por obtained her PhD in political science from Universiti Sains Malaysia in 2014 and a master degree in health and welfare policy from National Yang-Ming University, Taiwan, in 2001. Her geographical focus is mainly Malaysia, Southeast Asia, and East Asia. Her work has been published in prestigious peer-reviewed journals (Modern Asian Studies; Inter-Asia Cultural Studies; East Asia Science, Technology and Society: An International Journal; Journal of the Malaysian Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, Kajian Malaysia; and International Journal of Asia Pacific Studies) and in books published by Oxford University Press, Palgrave, and Routledge. (Orcid: 0000-0001-8362-0202)

ISAAC NEO is a political and security risk analyst in the private sector, and an independent researcher. He graduated with an MSc (Asian Studies) from the S. Rajaratnam School of International Studies, Nanyang Technological University, and has a BSoc.Sci in Political Science from the National University of Singapore. His research interests include state-society relations in Southeast Asia and climate change. He writes for Singapore-based media outlets and co-hosts a socialservice.sg podcast series in his free time.

JESSICA SANDRA R. CLAUDIO is an instructor at the Development Studies Program of the Ateneo de Manila University and Research Associate at the Institute of Philippine Culture. She is a sociologist working on gender and women's studies, health systems, education, and social movements. Jessica has conducted impact assessments, monitoring, evaluation research for various development and health programs. She was recently part of a project that explored disruptions and adaptations in service delivery of tuberculosis and family planning programs in the Philippines during the COVID-19 pandemic.

JOHANNA DEBORA IMELDA is an associate professor at the Department of Social Welfare, Faculty of Social and Political Sciences Universitas Indonesia. She earned her Master of Arts in Development Studies with a specialization in Population and Development from the Institute of Social Studies, the Hague, the Netherlands, in 1998–1999. Subsequently, she obtained a Master of Arts in Medical Anthropology at the Universiteit van Amsterdam, the Netherlands, in 2002–2003. Johanna completed her Doctoral degree from the Universiteit van Amsterdam, the Netherlands, 2011, with a thesis on preventing mother-to-child HIV transmission. In 2013–2014, she conducted postdoctoral research in Malaysia with financial support from Monash University Malaysia and Universiteit van Amsterdam, the Netherlands.

JOSE JOWEL CANUDAY is an associate professor and chair at the Department of Sociology and Anthropology of Ateneo de Manila University. He has served as the chief editor of the Social Transformation: Journal of the Global South since 2018. Jose holds a social and cultural anthropology doctorate from the University of Oxford and works on forced displacement, primary care, and development studies. He received the 2009 National Books Award for the Social Sciences in the Philippines.

LUONG BICH THUY, PhD is a social work lecturer at the University of Social Sciences and Humanities, Vietnam National University, Hanoi. Her research areas include social work in healthcare (with special interest in middle-aged women, postpartum women, and infertile patients), and social work with children and family.

MAI TUYET HANH, PhD in Sociology, is a principal lecturer at the University of Social Sciences and Humanities, Vietnam National University, Hanoi. Her research is both on social work and sociology, including on elderly population, community development, social policy, and social welfare in Vietnam. (Orcid: 0000-0003-4101-0478)

MELISSA QUETULIO-NAVARRA is an assistant professor at the Ateneo de Manila University and serves as the Executive Director of the Joly Homes Foundation. She had more than two decades of government experience in involuntary eviction, resettlement, and housing before joining the Ateneo Faculty. As Head of the Resettlement Division during her years with the government, she designed, pioneered, and led Participatory Resettlement Monitoring “Community Building” and “Community Organizing” in resettlement sites and headed participatory remedial interventions in 18 resettlement sites involving 30,000 families and amortization condonation programs for 89 resettlement sites. Melissa Quetulio-Navarra earned her Master’s in International Studies from Kobe University, Japan, and her PhD in Sociology at Wageningen University, the Netherlands. She has published research on housing, involuntary resettlement, social capital, calendar methods, and food security in the Philippines and Indonesia.

NGUYEN THI THAI LAN is an associate professor and a senior lecturer at the University of Social Sciences and Humanities, Vietnam National University, Hanoi. She gained her Bachelor of Arts in Vietnam, a Master of Social Work from the University of Regina, Canada (2004), and a PhD in Social Work from the University of New South Wales, Sydney (2015). A pioneer, qualified, trained lecturer in social work in Vietnam at the beginning of the 2000s, her contributions to the development of social work in Vietnam are well acknowledged in education and professionalization of professional social work. Her main interests are social work in child protection, social work indigenization and authentication, social care, social work research, and social welfare. (Orcid: 0000-0002-0780-5595)

RAPEEPUN JOMMAROENG is a lecturer at the Department of Community Health, Faculty of Public Health, Mahidol University, teaching health economics, research methodology, global health, sexual orientation, and gender identity. He is also an LGBTIQ+ activist with Rainbow Sky Association of Thailand since 2002 and a board member of the Thai National AIDS Foundation, advocating for effective domestic HIV financing. He has a PhD in demography with a visiting research fellowship at the Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health in Baltimore, USA. He has five master’s degrees in population and reproductive health research, mass communications, public health, public administration, and business administration. His published works include HIV-associated risk behaviors, universal health coverage in Thailand, targeted healthcare system development, and program evaluation among vulnerable populations. He has received funding from the British Embassy, Bangkok, and the Thai Health Fund to study social determinants of health and to pilot the first targeted health services on non-communicable diseases for lesbian, gay men, and transgender people in Thailand.

ROSALIA SCIORTINO SUMARYONO is an associate professor at the Institute for Population and Social Research, Mahidol University; Visiting Professor at the Master in International Development Studies (MAIDS), Chulalongkorn University; and Director of SEA Junction (seajunction.org). She has served as IDRC Regional Director for Southeast and East Asia (2010–2014), Senior Adviser to AusAID in Indonesia (2009–2010), and Regional Director for Southeast Asia of the Rockefeller Foundation (2000–2007). Rosalia Sciortino Sumaryono also served as a program officer at the Indonesia and Philippines offices of the Ford Foundation (1993–2000). She received her doctoral degree cum laude from the Vrije Universiteit in Amsterdam and has published widely on development issues in Southeast Asia. In November 2017, she received a medal from the Vietnamese Association of Social Sciences for her contributing to social sciences in Vietnam.

STEPHANIE CHOK is an independent researcher who received her PhD from Murdoch University, Western Australia. Her doctorate focused on the precariousness of low-paid temporary migrant workers in Singapore, and her thesis was runner-up in the 2015 Asian Studies Association of Australia President's Prize for Best Thesis on Asia. For the last ten years, she has volunteered and worked in non-governmental organizations. She has been involved in multiple research and advocacy projects, including reports on wage theft, forced labor, income inequality, and food insecurity.

TEERANONG SAKULSRI received her doctoral degree in Population Study from Mahidol University in 2015 and is an Associate Professor at the Institute for Population and Social Research (IPSR), Mahidol University. In 2019, she was Visiting Research Fellow at the University of Sussex with the Migrating Out of Poverty Research Programme Consortium and in 2018, she was funded by the Mekong-ROK Cooperation Fund, Republic of Korea to conduct policy research on safe migration for migrants from the Mekong countries to Thailand. Her current projects focus on migrant workers' rights in Thailand, especially in agriculture and elderly care.