THE CRUSHGRIND® VIKING KNIVES

Welcome to our CrushGrind® Knife Collection of meticulously crafted blades that embody the spirit of the ancient Norse warriors while delivering exceptional performance in the kitchen and outdoor cooking adventures.

Our inspiration comes from the Vikings' simple yet powerful knife designs, which played a crucial role in their lifestyle. The blade itself is inspired by knife findings and other weapon discoveries from the Viking Age. We've modified the shape to meet contemporary cooking standards while still maintaining a clear reference to our ancestors.

In the overall impression of the knife, we wanted to preserve the hardness and brutality that Viking weapons were meant to exude, while also incorporating the functionality that their tools had to achieve great success in the world.

The handle is made of solid wood to provide a secure grip. It should feel like a reliable tool in your hands. While drawing inspiration from the Viking design philosophy, we haven't forgotten modernity. Therefore, we've also placed great emphasis on functionality, the balance of the knife, the metal, and the grip.

Our vision with this knife is not just to create a tool but also to connect you with the heritage of the Vikings. It serves as a reminder of how ancient wisdom and modern technology can come together to create something beautiful and functional.

MATERIALS

Handles:

Produced in walnut

Blades:

German Steel X50CrMoV15

Wood was a crucial material for the construction of handles and shafts for tools and weapons. The Vikings used various types of wood, such as ash, oak, and birch, depending on the specific application. Wooden handles were often reinforced with metal fittings.

Vikings also made use of steel, especially for high-quality swords. Steel was created by heating iron and adding carbon to it, resulting in a stronger and more durable metal than plain iron. Viking swordsmiths were renowned for their skill in creating pattern-welded or damascus steel, which combined different types of steel to produce blades with distinctive patterns and superior performance.
