STARLUX GAMES

Remember being a kid, racing off with friends to go outside and play? We do!

At its heart, Starlux began on camping trips playing Capture the Flag. Working together as a team, sneaking around the forest, sprinting at full speed – it was the best game ever! These experiences took root as a business concept when we discovered how to use LED technology to create new types of active games.

We take pride in the innovative way that our games have evolved – but also find purpose in what we offer: bringing people together to do something active and memorable.

The founder of Starlux Games, Judd King, taught high school for nine years. During that time, he noticed youth becoming less aware of their surroundings and their peers. To combat this, “I wanted to create something I would have loved as a kid – but also something that would be so incredibly engaging and dynamic that teenagers would actually put their phones down and interact with each other.”

Eight years later, we’ve sold over 250,000 copies of our games, won over a dozen awards and been featured by publications ranging from The Wall Street Journal to Buzzfeed to The Today Show.

We couldn’t be where we are if it weren’t for the support and feedback from our AWESOME customers and retail partners.

Please reach out to us if you need anything!
