SCINTILLATING SWAGS
The gaiety and optimism of the era shone in garland and wreath floral designs, back in virtuoso form in Pasquale Bruni’s leafy diamond collar festooned with morganites.

TO-DIE-FOR “LACE”
Advances in platinum metalwork allowed for mesh-like jewelry designs, creating a lacy effect echoed in Van Cleef & Arpels’ bracelet with 266 small close-set diamonds (left).

FREE-FORM INGENUITY
Flurries of creativity unshackled norms, opening the door to innovative cluster-style tassels, rings, and pins (below, in Mikimoto’s luminous cultured pearl brooch).
DANGLING CARATS
Plunging necklines called for epic lavaliers and sautoirs like this one by Bayco, with rose-cut diamonds that look almost like beadwork—another hallmark of the era.

POWER PASTELS
