Valley of the Kings

RAMSES II

TOMB OF THE GREAT ANCESTOR

His name is 'Ozymandias, King of Kings', wrote the poet Percy Bysshe Shelley of Ramses II, the third pharaoh of the 19th Dynasty of Egypt and hailed as the 'Great Ancestor' of the Egyptian people. Regarded as the greatest and most powerful pharaoh of the New Kingdom, the tomb of Ramses II, or Ramses the Great, lies in the Valley of the Kings on the Nile's west bank near Luxor. In the ancient necropolis that accommodates 63 magnificent royal tombs, the tomb of Ramses II, numbered KV7, marks the final resting place of Egypt's 'Keeper of Harmony and Balance, Strong in Right, Elect of Ra'. An ardent patron of Egyptian art and culture, Ramses II lived to be 96 years old, cementing his position as one of the most charismatic and influential rulers that Egypt has ever produced.

TUTANKHAMUN

THE BOY KING

Crowned pharaoh of the 18th dynasty at the tender age of 9, Tutankhamun, whose reign lasted only nine years, has become a richly evocative symbol of ancient Egyptian civilization.

In the year 1922, the archaeologist Howard Carter discovered King Tut's golden sarcophagus and a cornucopia of treasures left untouched in his tomb KV62 in the Valley of the Kings.

Since then, his name, which means 'the living image of the god Amun', has resounded throughout the world as the most identifiable symbol of the splendor and opulence of ancient Egypt. Although mysteries surrounding his untimely death abound, the golden king Tutankhamun lives on, captivating our imagination to this day.
