

Helena Collection

Philosophy.

Simple elegant lines, seamless material transitions, and delicately nesting parts make up this well balanced collection. Glass as a fluid lends itself to forms that have rounded contours.

This collection starts with accentuation of a natural molten glass teardrop which is shaped into a long cylindrical form. The rounded bottom creates a soft landing point as the eye travels down the accentuated length of the form.

Its primary color application is an elegant opal white fade creating a delicate two tone effect further diffusing the light. This duality of soft diffused light and clear transparent glass at the bottom of the form adds a sophistication within the product.

Helena in greek means Shining Light Helena was born when gold was discovered in Last Chance Gulch on July 14, 1864. The area takes its name from the “Four Georgians,” the miners that discovered the gold. Helena was their “Last Chance” to discover gold before heading home.

Some accounts insist that Helena was named after a miner’s Minnesota sweetheart. Another says it was originally “St. Helena,” after the island where Napoleon was exiled.

Helena National Forest was where Lewis and Clark passed through on their epic journey.
