

SERVICE IDEAS

2020 BOOK

SINCE 1946

Taking Pride in Customer Experience

All my life, I've somehow been involved in the hospitality industry. I've never known what it's like to have a dining out experience that wasn't equally attuned to the details around presentation and the quality of the food and beverage. It was the little details I grew up learning—the weight of the flatware, the shape of the glass, the pattern on the china, and of course, the vessel the coffee was served from. It became second nature to flip over the serviceware and look for clues as to who made the product.

Our family history in the hospitality industry dates back to 1933, when my grandparents opened their first restaurant. This led to them opening Murray's Steakhouse in 1946, a restaurant still located in downtown Minneapolis. It was this restaurant that inspired Service Ideas. My dad took over the management of both family businesses in the 1970s.

When I was a kid, my dad would occasionally take us to his office above Murray's on Saturday afternoons. As a very young girl, I considered his profession to be the much more public position of hosting customers and serving meals at the restaurant. It wasn't until my teen years that I started seeing the individual identities of the two businesses, and the significant influence they had on each other.

Both businesses revolve around creating an exceptional dining experience—one with preparing quality food and beverages, and the other with how it is served. To this day, Service Ideas' takes great pride in the subtle details and we are grateful for the opportunity to be a part of each customer's business with the products we create.

Let's Get Technical

FLAME FREE™ THERMO-URN™

QUALITY LEVEL

We test each urn to ensure optimal performance. Compared to an industry standard 3-gallon urn with foam insulation, our Thermo-Urn™ outperformed the competition every time.

CONSTRUCTION

In 2010, the technology of the Thermo-Urn™ made a huge impact on beverage service, bringing the largest insulated vessel to the market. Since then, we've introduced more colors and leg designs to meet your unique style.

PERFORMANCE

Optimal drinking temperature of coffee is 155°F to 165°F. Even after six hours, all of our Flame Free™ Thermo-Urns™ are well within or above optimal drinking temperature range, while the competitor's foam urn falls below after just one hour.

VALUE

With a Flame Free™ Thermo-Urn™, you could end up saving yourself hundreds of dollars each year and receive a return on your investment in a matter of months. See the breakdown below.

Local Stardom Strikes When the Stars Align

A winning combination of grit and luck form one chef's success story.

by Ann Bauer // Lake Elmo, MN

Located in the quaint town of Lake Elmo, Minnesota, is an acclaimed restaurant with both local charm and national appeal. Its existence dates back to the 1940s and has been known by various names such as Ben's Inn and Elmo Inn.

It wasn't until 1983, when a young chef by the name of John Schiltz took over the business and renamed the restaurant Lake Elmo Inn. The restaurant soon took off and claimed its place among the best restaurants in the country.

Although Schiltz's rise to local stardom didn't just appear out of thin air and without hard work, it did start with an endearing story of fate.

His introduction to the foodservice industry was actually quite ordinary. In high school, Schiltz began working at the Inn for the restaurant's previous owner. He continued to work there as a dishwasher and then as a cook for the next four years while he finished high school and studied culinary arts at St. Paul College.

After graduating, he traveled around the country working for various restaurants until he landed in Des Moines, Iowa, where he became the executive chef for Hyatt.

About a year and a half later, during what could have been just another weekend visit to his home town, was a stroke of luck that turned out to be a pivotal moment in the trajectory of Chef Schiltz life, and in the history of the Inn.

Schiltz made the trip home that weekend to attend a wedding of a local lumberyard owner, and by chance, that was the day the Inn went on the market.

"He did not want to sell to me," said Schiltz of the previous owner—the same man who employed him during high school and college.

"I said to him, 'I can do it, I know I can.'" Schiltz persisted that his education and experience with the Hyatt had given him the confidence and skills to run his own restaurant.

It was not an easy sell. In fact, had it not been for the previous owners wife eavesdropping around the corner, things might have ended a little differently. After hearing Schiltz talk so passionately about taking over the business, she insisted they give him a chance.

And so, on December 1st, 1983, he embarked on a new adventure and never looked back.

Building a Reputation

The vibe at the restaurant gives an immediate sense of nostalgia. Located on a corner lot in downtown Lake Elmo, the historic building looks picturesque, with its original bed and breakfast foundation, neatly arranged flowerbeds, and glass-enclosed dining room.

The interior walls of the restaurant lined with thousands of salt and pepper shakers, come with a unique story of their own.

"It was the second Friday of May in 1984," said Schiltz, as he recalled a review he received from a Star Tribune writer. "He wrote an article on us in the food section that day, and he criticized what was on my book shelf." After the article was published, he approached his grandmother about buying her collection of salt and pepper shakers so he could decorate the book shelves in his new restaurant. Since then, loyal customers, have added to the collection. "I have about 7,000," he said. Only 1,200 shakers are on display, the rest are in storage.

The traditions continue throughout meal service. Each entrée at his restaurant starts with a traditional French pallet cleanser called an intermezzo—a light and refreshing two-bite sorbet meant to set the stage for the main entrée—and ends with a hot hand towel infused with cinnamon fragrance and a chocolate dipped strawberry to sweeten the deal.

"For us, we are so different, it's about providing the whole experience. We want people to come here and have an experience and have a memory," said Schiltz.

Expanding Horizons

In Lake Elmo Inn's early days, Schiltz had 10 cooks. Now he has 25 between the restaurant and the catering business. He employs about 175 total at one given time.

Over the years, the Inn has had many renovations, including the addition of what Schiltz calls the "Modern Room," inspired by the Louvre Pyramid in Paris, France. This patio area has old-world charm, while the all-glass enclosure gives it a contemporary feel.

They also expanded their catering services in 2006, with the purchase a new event space. "Catering has been part of our life here for about 30 years," Schiltz said. "But it has grown rather quickly since the opening of our event center."

The majority of the catering is still done off-site, and is coordinated by his wife, Chris Schiltz. They have five trucks that cater weddings, fundraisers, and corporate business events throughout the year. The event space itself accommodates up to 300 guests, and they service a half-a-dozen or so weddings every year in the courtyard.

Future Growth

Schiltz has built a solid foundation for the restaurant to run on with many years of hard work. "For 13 years, I lived above the restaurant. Every day I was awake, I was at work," he said. "Now it's just about having the right people."

As Schiltz looks to the future, he's looking forward to more time off with his wife, along with the continued success and growth of the restaurant. He is proud and confident that he and his team have the ability to continue the tradition of Lake Elmo Inn's hospitality for many years to come.

Trail Blazing for Fair Trade Coffee

A roaster first and foremost, Peace Coffee captivates consumers with high-quality fair trade coffee and a sense of belonging.

by Payton DeMaster // Minneapolis, MN

Whether it be by foot in store, two-wheel bike delivery, or a mobile coffee truck, Peace Coffee will find a way to get 100% fair trade coffee into your hands. Started by accident 24 years ago, Peace Coffee now has a growing roastery, four coffee shops, and one coffee truck all surrounding the greater Minneapolis-Saint Paul Area of Minnesota.

How Peace Started

Peace's Director of Marketing, Melanee Meegan, and Associate Director of Sales and Customer Experience, Stacy McCoy, give some insight on how Peace Coffee started, their plans for the future, and their passion for fair trade coffee.

"It began with receiving two containers full of coffee from Mexico," said Meegan. "At that point, we did just about anything to sell the coffee including going door-to-door, visiting co-ops and grocery stores, and delivering to all of our accounts on bikes."

Peace Coffee was started by the Institute for Agriculture and Trade Policy (IATP), a non-profit with a mission to help American farmers during the family farm crisis in the 1980s. They then discovered that surrounding countries needed the most help.

In 1996, Peace coffee received their first shipment from Chiapas, Mexico. Since then, the coffee Peace purchases is 100% fair trade certified, organic coffee from small-scale farmers.

"Currently we import coffee from 12 different countries, and around 20 different farmer co-ops," said McCoy. "We work collectively with other national roasters through our co-op, Cooperative Coffees to find new coffee sources. We require that all coffee imported needs to be organic and 100% fair trade."

Community Minded

With a well-known presence in the Midwest, and being the predominate trailblazers for fair trade coffee, Peace Coffee continues to be passionate about coffee, they want to have a positive effect on local communities too.

"We hope that some of the things we do inspire consumers to visit us, and other coffee shops to copy us," stated Meegan. "For instance, we'd love if everyone wanted to serve 100% fair trade coffee, or participate in bike deliveries, that would be awesome!"

Supplying Minnesota's Breakrooms

From station wagon to number one office coffee service provider in the region, Berry Coffee's dream becomes reality.

by Ann Bauer // Eden Prairie, MN

"I didn't even drink coffee," said Steve Brehm, recalling his life 40 years ago when he was just embarking on a new business adventure. Ironically, although he didn't like coffee (yet), he found that he loved the coffee business.

Steve got his start in the coffee industry right out of college, when he went to work for a regional coffee company as a sales representative. He worked there for two years, followed by another brief stint with a national coffee company.

Worn out from all of the travel, Steve knew he wanted a change. He also saw people in offices struggling with how to provide coffee to their employees. So, in the fall of 1979, he started Berry Coffee Co. with nothing more than a station wagon and a dream of growing his own business.

Today, Steve's son Joey Brehm works alongside him, and Berry Coffee has grown to be the number one office coffee service provider in Minneapolis, Minn. Their 12 drivers make between 150-350 deliveries a day.

Recently, they've expanded into the foodservice industry with their new espresso program designed for hotels and restaurants. They provide 24/7 service to accommodate these foodservice accounts.

"We have our roasting operation so we're putting a lot of time, energy, and money into that," said Joey. This is a fairly new service from Berry Coffee so people are just becoming aware of its availability.

"We can build out some wonderful blends, and we can do it any way they want it," said Steve. "The freshness is something that people really love," he said.

back to the very beginning. "We were technically probably one of the first OCS customers you've done business with," said Steve.

One of Steve's earliest customers approached him looking to get their logo printed on a coffee carafe. Through some networking, he stumbled upon Service Ideas. Since then, he has supplied a number of Service Ideas coffee pots, airpots, and thermal dispensers to his customers.

"Our model is to always give free equipment and maintain it as long as they buy coffee from us," said Joey. This is a huge advantage to their customers.
