Forced Labour and Child Labour in Canadian Supply Chains
Report for Financial Year ended Sep 30, 2023

Reporting for entities

1. *What steps has the entity taken in the previous financial year to prevent and reduce the risk that forced labour or child labour is used at any step of the production of goods in Canada or elsewhere by the entity or of goods imported into Canada by the entity? Select all that apply. (Required)

- Conducting an internal assessment of risks of forced labour and/or child labour in the organization's activities and supply chains
- Engaging with supply chain partners on the issue of addressing forced labour and/or child labour

2. Please provide additional information describing the steps taken (if applicable) (1,500 character limit).

- Note that the financial year ended Sep 30 2023 occurred prior to the FLICS legislation, hence any steps taken occurred before this legislation took effect.
- The company's internal assessment concluded that the risk of forced labour or child labour in its supply chain is minimal. The company's primary business is to purchase small quantities of consumer products for resale, usually from large distributors and not typically directly from factories. These distributors are typically large well-established reputable global (typically North-America based) companies, who the company believes abide by labour laws and are ultimately responsible for their supply chains. Also, in the majority of cases, the identity of the factory is not known to the company, and the company is not in a position to know or influence the factory's production process or labour policies. In the rarer cases that the company purchases directly from a factory, it chooses where possible reputable factories in well-established and sophisticated manufacturing regions where labour laws are well known and respected.
- Based on this assessment and ongoing monitoring, the company is not aware of any instance of forced labour or child labour in its supply chain. Finally, the company is a long-standing and responsible member of the business community and engages with industry and government stakeholders to do its part.
