Reforming International Economic Institutions for a more prosperous, just and sustainable world economic order

Following the Great Depression and the Second World War, the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and World Bank were established (at Bretton Woods) to stabilize and encourage economic growth. With the addition of trade agreements and now the World Trade Organization, the three economic institutions aim for a prosperous, just and sustainable world economy that obviously depends upon a healthy global environment. However recent disjoint responses to the climate emergency and the COVID-19 pandemic highlight the need for fundamental reform of these economic institutions.

Peter Venton, Economist

Peter will review ideas expressed by Gallagher and Kozul-Wright, in their new book The Case for a New Bretton Woods, about the need for sweeping reform to the international financial system, trade and investment, and development finance.

What is the role of such sweeping reform in the emergence of a World Federation? How can the World Federalist Movement Canada – Toronto Branch encourage such reforms?

Hear and debate these ideas by registering, to receive the Zoom coordinates for the 7:00 PM (EST) seminar, Wednesday Nov 16.
