Emma didn't know what to do. She had just overheard something really terrible.

"I'm pretty sure Emma has dyslexia," the school nurse had whispered to Emma's teacher. "That's why she's been having so much trouble in class."

Emma had never heard that word before. Dis...lex...seer? What was that? It sounded horrible.

Emma had been having a tough time at school lately. Miss Lee had scolded her for not finishing her spelling test in time.

Mr Chan had called her lazy because she couldn't finish her homework.

When Dad came to pick her up from school, Emma didn't say a word. "You okay, Em?" Dad asked. Emma just nodded.

When they got home, Emma immediately carried Ginger to the park behind their house. She needed to ask her best friend for some advice.

At the playground, Emma saw a sign she had never seen before. She tried to read the words but couldn't. It was just like how she couldn't read what Miss Lee was writing on the board in class today.

"Come on, Ginger."

DANGER - KEEP OUT!

危險，請避開!

BAHAYA - JANGAN DEKAT!

பாபாயம் - அருகில் உராதர்கள்!

Here are two things
Emma knows for sure:

One, she's lost Ginger.

Two, the doctor says
she has "dyslexia".

What's...dyslexia?
Will Mum and Dad be mad?
And will she ever find Ginger?
