“It’s Xandy’s birthday!” said Mama and Papa. “And we’re going to celebrate at the S.E.A. Aquarium with the Ocean Dreams overnight stay and a party there the next day. Sam, Sebbie, and Di-Di-Di cried, “Hooray! Xandy’s never been to the S.E.A. Aquarium before. Ocean Dreams will be so much fun for us all!”

At the S.E.A. Aquarium, they had an exciting time exploring the Maritime Experiential Museum. After that, they battled a raging storm and angry sea at the Typhoon Theatre. Then they rushed into an underwater tunnel that looked like a cave. They weren't frightened; they were very, very brave.

“I hope we remembered to pack everything,”
said Sam as they rushed through the tunnel.

“I think we did,” said Di-Di-Di, stopping to check their bags. He checked once and then twice, and then he gasped, “Oh no, we forgot the party decorations!”

“But it’s my birthday tomorrow. How can we have a party without the decorations?” asked Xandy.

“I’m sure we can find some here,” said Sebbie. “Do you know where we can find party decorations?” he asked Mark the Friendly Shark.

“Hello,” said Mark. “Are party decorations a type of fish? It’s our job to make sure there aren’t too many.”

“No, fish aren’t decorations,” said Sam. “But how do you make sure that there aren’t too many fish?”

“Well, we eat them!”

“But what if there are too many sharks?” asked Di-Di-Di. “Who eats you?”

“Oh, no, no! No one should eat us. If they do, who will do our job?” said Mark.

“OK, we promise we won’t eat you,” said Xandy and off they went in search of decorations.

“Do you know where we can find any decorations?”
Sam asked Mrs Peele the Moray Eel.

“Are decorations a kind of food?” asked Mrs Peele.
“I think I’ve got one stuck in my teeth.”

Cleo the Cleaner Shrimp, scurried up to check.

“Is this a decoration?” Cleo asked,
pulling something from Mrs Peele’s teeth.

“Er...yuck, no, that’s not a decoration, that’s disgusting!” said Sebbie.

And once again, they went off on their search.

Panic stations!

It's Xandy's birthday party and someone's forgotten the decorations. So Sam, Sebbie, Di-Di-Di and Xandy are off to get help from the creatures of the aquarium. These newfound friends may just save the day—and the celebrations.
