EPIGRAM BOOKS / SINGAPORE

Tibby the Tiger-Bunny was hopping and squeaking, pouncing and roaring through the forest.

Suddenly, he heard a loud SPLASH!
Then a quacky voice cried out, "Help!"

“I’m coming!” Tibby said. He leapt into the pond and pulled Duckie to shore.

“Are you okay?” Tibby asked.

“I drank lots of water! But yes, thanks for saving me!” Duckie said.

Then Duckie stomped her clawed feet.

“Why can’t I swim?”

“Maybe you’re not the swimming kind,” Tibby said.

Duckie preened her feathers with her pointy beak.

“Well, how come you are?”

“I’m a tiger-bunny,” Tibby said, “I swim like a tiger and hop like a bunny.”

About the Author

Award-winning author Emily Lim is the first outside North America to win three medals in children's books at the IPPY awards (the world's largest book awards) and also the first in Southeast Asia to win the Moonbeam Children's Book Award. She was a synchronised kind of swimmer and in 2007, she discovered who she really was—a writer of children's books.

About the Illustrator

Jade Fang is one of Singapore's up and coming new illustrators. She has illustrated several children's books for various publishers since completing her Master of Fine Arts degree in Illustration from Academy of Art University, San Francisco. She's a swimmingly multi-medium kind of artist who discovered that she likes drawing fun and inspiring pieces best.

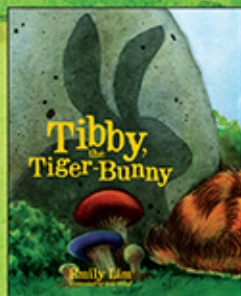

Unlike other ducks, Duckie cannot swim.
Tibby the Tiger-Bunny finds ways to help
Duckie swim—but nothing works.

Tibby wonders if Duckie is a swimming kind of duck and, in the end, helps his new friend discover who she really is.
