Tibby was climbing a mango tree when he spotted a young boar sniffing for fallen fruit. "Hi there!" Tibby called out.

Snout looked up.

"Tiger!" he cried, disappearing into the bushes.

“Don’t be afraid. I’m a tiger-bunny,” Tibby said.

“You won’t eat me?” Snout asked.

“No! I roar like a tiger but nibble like a bunny,” Tibby said.

“Hey, I thought boars sleep in the day and come out at night.”

“Not me,” Snout whispered. “I shut my eyes tight at night so I won’t see any scary creatures.”

“Come out,” Tibby said, feeling sorry for the young boar.

“Let’s eat mangoes together.”

Snout sniffed the mangoes longingly and then sighed.

“Thanks. But I’m quite sure this hot afternoon sun will roast me,” Snout said.

“Hmm... I know a shaded picnic spot,” Tibby said.

Tibby led Snout to a hidden cave.
“It’s dark inside!” Snout said.

“I thought boars like dark places,” Tibby said.

“Not me,” Snout said.

“Who knows what monsters are hiding inside?”

About the Author

Award-winning author Emily Lim is the first outside North America to win three medals for children's books at the IPPY awards (the world's largest book awards). She is also the first author in Southeast Asia to win the Moonbeam Children's Book Award. Like Scaredy Snout, Emily is sometimes afraid of trying out new things. She's found that having friends like Tibby to nudge her along helps her to face her fears.

About the Illustrator

Jade Fang has illustrated several children's books for various publishers since completing her Master of Fine Arts degree in Illustration from the Academy of Art University, San Francisco. Jade is not afraid of drawing two-headed monsters, creepy-crawlies and giant worms with hairy legs.

Tibby the tiger-bunny meets a young boar who is scared of everything. Snout has no friends because he is afraid to do what boars naturally do. When they become friends, Tibby shows Snout that some things are not as scary as he thinks.
