Tibby was an unusual bunny.

Sometimes he pounced.
Sometimes he hopped.
And sometimes he didn't know
if he should roar or squeak.

The other rabbits asked themselves,
“Is Tibby a tiger that looks like a bunny?
Or is he a bunny that looks like a tiger?”

I wonder if the others will talk to me if I look more like them, Tibby thought. He rubbed his whole fur coat with mud.

But the rain came and his new coat was washed away.

Poor Tibby! All he ever wanted was some friends to play with, but the other rabbits thought he was too strange. After all, he could pounce and roar like a tiger. But he also had long floppy ears and could hop like a bunny.

Was he a tiger or a bunny?

No one knew, until the day Tibby showed everyone just how much of a tiger—and a bunny—he really was.
