Drusus Tabor

Photography by William Abranowicz.

Just as there was never a Mr. “Lord” or Mr. “Taylor,” designer Chip Dort invented “Drusus Tabor”—the name of his New York-based block print textile company—after seeing a photograph depicting generations of English schoolboys’ names carved into the paneling of a classroom wall. This nod to the past speaks to his unique aesthetic sensibility, which is rooted in a deep appreciation of the history of fine and decorative arts.

We are thrilled to collaborate with Drusus Tabor on this collection of imaginative, dynamic hand-printed textiles and wallpapers as well as designs that capture the subtle irregularities and nuanced look of block prints.
