Rethinking the traditional stool

The rethinking of something as simple as a stool was the starting point for Normann Copenhagen's Tap Stool. The designer Simon Legald has taken up the challenge and breathed new life into the traditional stool with original materials and details. In doing so, he has created a practical and beautiful design in the cross field of craftsmanship and industry. Tap is an unexpected, different, yet familiar stackable stool in a class of its own. The moulded seat ensures good seating comfort and provides the stool with the same welcoming warmth known from upholstered furniture. The three legs have an integrated transition to the seat. This gives Tap the appearance of a unified whole, even when seen from the side.
