Bio

Lisa Walbridge is the founder of the Merry Alchemy jewelry brand, whose main purpose is to provide floral-inspired adornments to women who appreciate vibrant colors, distinctive designs, and the aesthetic of a bygone era.

Before she ever strung her first fateful bead, Lisa was classically trained as an architect at the University of Notre Dame. After being introduced to the world of jewelry art and design in 2007, Lisa recognized that design of jewelry, rather than buildings, was her true passion. She launched Merry Alchemy in 2010, which takes its inspiration from shabby chic décor, flower gardens, ornate patterns, and vintage styles.

Merry Alchemy is simply about celebrating the loveliest aspects of the world and transmuting individual components into singular jewelry pieces that bring joy and delight to the wearer.

Originally from Scituate, Massachusetts, Lisa now lives in a tiny hamlet overlooking a horse farm in New York's lower Hudson Valley with her husband and daughter. When she is not digi-angsting over her professional bio, she can be found playing pretend with her daughter, channeling her inner pastry chef, fiendishly devouring a tall stack of novels, and hiding green veggies in toddler-friendly foods.

Holiday Collection

Inspiration

To me, Christmas is everything. Magic. Love. Hope. Gratitude. Joy.

This line is an ever-growing collection of tiny pieces of Christmas spirit. I wanted to put everything that Christmas is to me into something that my customers could wear during the season both to share their own holiday spirit and also to remind themselves of the beauty and joy of the season. I have designed classy pieces that can be worn to run errands, work, or to a fancy party. They are understated and traditional. Some are classy with a little bit of kitsch thrown in Because.Christmas!
