PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

MAKE PROFESSIONAL GROWTH FRONT AND CENTER IN THE NEW YEAR

One thing that we learned from COVID-19 is that you must adapt and respond quickly as events change. Part of the agility necessary to do so requires continuing to add new skills. Hopefully, your business never will experience anything as dramatic as a pandemic again. Still client needs and marketplace demands necessitate that you continue to build up your knowledge to be ready for change.

No matter how expert you are in certain types of massage or skin care treatments, you cannot afford to become complacent. Consider the following; As your clientele ages will you be ready to offer them the most advanced treatments to meet their changing physical needs? What would happen if a new competitor sets up shop nearby offering a wider range of treatment options? Could you lose clients to the newcomer? You may find that you have too many open timeslots on your schedule. Will filling them require offering new services?

These are not remote possibilities and that's why you need to arm yourself with more and the latest new skills. Keep abreast of emerging popular treatments and, as appropriate, add them to your menu options. Take professional training, in class or online; read as much as you can in professional journals and participate in social channels so you can keep up to date on industry developments and ask questions.

Any new area you decide to pursue should excite you! Take time to decide what appeals to you and what is right for your business and then proceed with passion. You and your clients will reap the rewards.

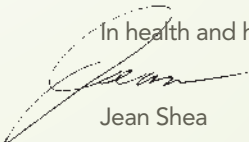

In health and healing,

Jean Shea

SHELF LIFE

When stored in a cool, dry environment avoiding direct light, the estimated shelf life of BIOTONE® Products from date of manufacture is as follows: cremes, butters, lotions and balms – 18 months; muds – 15 months; oils, gels, sugar body polishes, hydrating wrap – 12 months; salt scrubs – 8 months. Refrigeration provides the longest shelf life. Avoid freezing.

LAUNDRY CAUTION

Use caution when laundering linens that have been exposed to oils. ALL oil products, regardless of brand, are potentially combustible when exposed to the heat of a dryer. Use medium dryer setting and allow linens to cool completely before storing. Consult dryer manufacturer's guidelines for drying linens that have been exposed to oils.
