What's in the air this month

Steel Moderne

What better way to support British Modernism than with a seminal design from the 1960s? That is precisely the idea behind a collaboration between the National Trust and Anglepoise, to help maintain Patrick Gwynne’s The Homewood in Surrey. Together they have launched a new colour of lamp inspired by the property’s creamy glow, an effect of the foliage-filtered light pouring in through the wide windows enabled by its Corbusian construction. Similarly inspired by the times, car designer George Carwardine based the Anglepoise on vehicle suspension systems, making this a meaningful marriage between two veritable pioneers. Shown above right: Original 1227 Mini table lamp, £395. Visit anglepoise.com

Matrix Revisited

Those Postmodernists knew the power of a repeated pattern. Witness the grid motif on Superstudio’s ‘Quaderna’ series (below left), which remains as instantly identifiable as a can of Campbell’s soup. The laminate used was created by Alex Ppiration and allowed the Italian architectural firm to stamp its furniture with the mathematical modularity of a Rubik’s cube or graph paper. Produced by Zanotta in 1970, and subsequently expanded to include a rug, coffee table and desk (£3,865), the collection amounted to an ironic anti-design statement by

Light Relief

It is tricky to take artistic inspiration without producing paper – and ended up with a range of lamps. Created for maison marras, which was founded by the painter’s family, ‘Foil’ pays homage to a particularly joyful body of work. Shown below left: ‘Lustre Fold’, from £6,795 approx. Visit maison-marras.com

Avine Dining

 Mud-brick derocace towers punctuate Egypt’s landscape (Wai June 2021). A conversation about one such construction provided the clarion call for a collaboration between Laila Gohar, a native of that country, and the Belgian designers Frien Muller and Hannes van Severen. After having dealt with, they came up with the ‘Pigeon’ table above: £350 approx, its tiered shelves the perfect perch, perhaps, for delicacies from the Middle East. Visit marrasnorm.ttwt or lailagohar.com

Superstudio, which saw a world wrapped in repeated order. Visit commeshop.com

Lounge Wizards

The days of sitting up straight are behind us. Or so think design duo star Crawford and Oscar Pena, who, like Dean Martin when he asked ‘how d’ya like your eggs in the morning’, discovered that everyone has different requirements. Inspired by Bruno Moinet’s 1944 poster Seeing Comfort in an Uncomfortable Chair, ‘Bruno’ (below: £6,060) offers a multitude of ways of sloouching and is made at its factory in Norfolk from sustainably sourced materials with the aim of reducing the use of polymer foam so ubiquitous in lesser contemporary seating. Visit superstudio.uk

HOLLY HUNT London
20 Grafton Street, Mayfair, W1S 4RD
Tel: +44 (0)20 7399 0280
uk.hollyhunt.com

Design by Christian Astuguevieille