Pipedream™

The Pipedream is a pentatonic metallophone (five notes to the octave, metal "xylophone") with eight tubes on a wooden base. Each tube is musically tuned to specific notes. The tone quality varies in this range: higher tubes are more percussive; lower tubes have more resonance. That's built into the design of the instrument.

The tunes in this song sheet are written in traditional western notation with the addition of numbers below the notes. The numbers correspond to the tubes of the instrument as illustrated in the chart below. To achieve the best quality sound, strike the middle of each tube while playing. To dampen the sound, simply touch the open end of the tube(s) after striking. These songs and more are available at www.chimes.com! It's totally up to you how far you take this – there are numerous possibilities to dream of and experience!

Pipedream™

We hope you love playing your Pipedream as much as we do. The Pipedream is a great instrument for self-expression and discovery. Its scale is rooted in the music of ancient civilizations, which may not be as familiar to you as the modern western diatonic piano scale. The Pipedream is a very accessible improvisational instrument. There is no limit to the compositions you can create.

Throughout history, originality has been a sign of great art. Think of your Pipedream as a free-form instrument. There are no rules – as simple as it is to play a single note, it's that easy to make up your own song, be it long or short. With improvisation you can respond to what you are hearing around you or what you are feeling at the moment.

Everyone doodles on paper from time to time, freely and without self-consciousness. Imagine your Pipedream as an empty pad of paper on which you are taking notes. As you listen to your environment, use your Pipedream to jot down ideas, scribble images and document your experiences. You may discover other familiar melodies on your Pipedream as you improvise. Who knows, your Pipedream may be the instrument that brings out the musician in you.
