It might be in the CBD but don't expect any watering-down for the corporate crowd; all espresso-based drinks here are double shots ("You just get a better extraction," explains director Adrian Khong "so I'm prepared to live with a smaller margin"), and there's no blends, only single-origin beans, roasted no more than a couple of weeks prior. Try the house special Gibraltar ($5.50), a kind of bastard child of the latte and macchiato, served in a special panelled glass.
