Designer homeware is one of our searched for terms on Google after a year of working from home.

In addition to stocking up on scented candles, silk pillowcases and plants we've long been lusting after interiors essentials that'll help elevate our makeshift offices, living rooms and hallways into a boujee, hotel-inspired sanctuary.

A quick look at Instagram and Pinterest and you'll see there's an abundance of luxury fashion houses, like Loewe, Missoni and Bella Freud tapping into the designer homeware market, producing everything from throws and artwork to cushion covers and trinket trays. Meanwhile, the likes of artist Anissa Kermiche have become household (pardon the pun) names, thanks to her now era-defining vases and pots.

With our summer wardrobes filled with bikinis and linen dresses, we're rounded up the best designer homeware pieces to give your home the luxury update it deserves.
