

Sunset

Prints Charming: Our Favorite Indie Home Textile and Wallpaper Designers

Courtesy of Brook Perdigon

Brooke Perdigon at work on her collection of home textiles

For all of the pattern and color lovers out there, here are five small, California-based independent designers making the most beautiful textiles in the business.

CHRISTINE LENNON – May 25, 2021 | Updated May 26, 2021

Home sales are skyrocketing. There's a materials and labor shortage for renovations. Supply chain interruptions are still making it next to impossible to splurge on the refrigerator of your dreams. And if you want a brand new sofa, you might just have to wait until 2022. What's a home-owner who's desperate for a refresh to do? Call your upholsterer, or your favorite wallpaper hanger, and order a few rolls or yardage from a local designer. An upholstery project, or a splashy new print pasted on a wall or two, is one of the quickest fixes you'll find these days to freshen up a tired space. And if you find a pattern you love from one of these independent designers featured here, it'll be printed here in the U.S. and you'll be supporting a woman-owned business in the process.

Brook Perdigon: Los Angeles, CA

Perdigon's Toile de Terrain is a hand-drawn pattern of a rolling hillside

If you're allergic to floral prints, or searching for a flower-free pattern to balance out a floral obsession (no judgement) Brook Perdigon Textiles may be what you're looking for. Perdigon starts the design process in her studio with paints, sketches, and cut-paper graphic designs, and finds inspiration for her earthy color palette in both the California landscape and her extensive travels. Evidence of her experience designing carpets for Tai Ping is all over her work, which is strong on linear patterns, diamonds, and re-imagined plaids.