BAIT PRESENTATIONS

OCTOPUS/BEAK HOOK

Wide gap allows bait to swim freely. In-line turned up eye provides great leverage for power hook-sets. Use heavier wire hooks for bigger fish. Lighter wire hooks allow more natural bait presentation.

LEECHES

Thread hook through sucker.

NIGHTCRAWLERS

Thread hook through band.

MINNOWS

Casting—Thread hook point through bottom and top of mouth.

Bobber—Thread hook under dorsal fin.

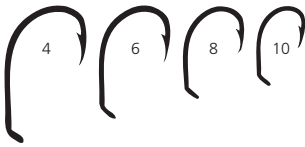

Thread on a piece, leaving one end free.

What a great tool to help reduce the mortality of smaller-sized fish

When fish are caught in deeper water, the dramatic change in pressure as the fish is reeled to the surface, often results in an unacceptably high mortality rate. Imagine the harm multitudes of anglers can place on a fishery with catches of many small fish that are only released to die.

Mustad Appendage hooks incorporate a stiff piece of wire which makes the hook profile much larger and does not allow the undesirable smaller fish to get the hook into their mouth. These hooks offer great flexibility, as anglers can adjust position of the appendage wire as desired to target larger or smaller fish. And, along with reducing mortality of smaller fish, it allows an angler to spend more time specifically targeting trophy-sized fish by getting the bait through countless small fish.

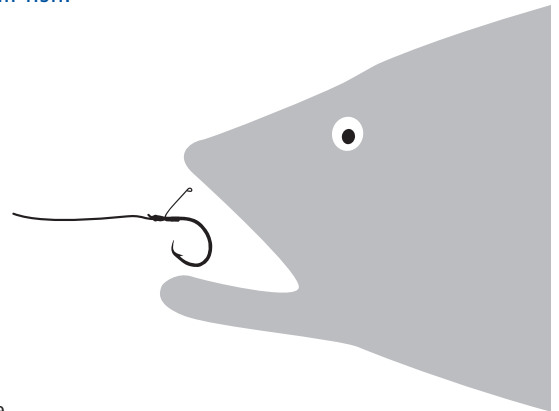

Appendage wire prevents small fish from swallowing hook.

FOR BIGGER
FISH

FOR SMALLER FISH

You can adjust the appendage hook to target the size of the fish by adjusting the appendage wire. The farther out you bend the appendage wire, making the hook profile larger, the more small fish you exclude. If you want to be able to catch smaller fish, you can simply bend the wire back toward the shank, shrinking the hook profile.

Large fish can get entire appendage hook in its mouth
