INTRO

»WILD WILD« is an ode to childhood and the sense of wildness. We encourage every child all over the world to be wild. We want you to come back home in dirty clothes - it's okay to have your shoes covered in mud, to get soil under your fingernails, to brave a bee sting or perhaps put up with a scraped knee. Stroll through the woods, play with sticks and stones, make bonfires and sleep under skies full of stars. Challenge yourself, connect with yourself to understand your boundaries, and break them down. Learn who you are, be loud, be still, be fast or hide deep in the bushes. Run wild, be wild.

ABOUT THE CAMPAIGN

It feels like children nowadays grow up in a hypervigilant Orwellian world where freedom can only be of mind and spirit. The focus is not on the children and their needs anymore, it is more so about the risk, or fear, of the beloved child getting hurt. Risks - meaning a potential danger rather than an actual danger in itself - are being erased from the child's experience of growth while they keep getting constant advice and warning on how they should behave to avoid them. Through NO's and words that we express like "you are going to fall!", we are not allowing them to experiment and make their own journey through the amazing thing that is life. The implicit message they actually get from this is: "someone knows more than me what is right for me". If we do not allow them freedom, we are robbing them of the option to learn about self-responsibility and accountability.

Now, some of these dangers can be real, some of them are things we have been warned about but have never experienced, some of them are fears happening only in our heads. Of course we need to take care of our children and protect them from dangers. But it is time to redeem "risk" and make it an acceptable part of childhood again. They do not need to live their lives through our lenses, but make and build their own journey instead, as the free human beings they are. Nothing is more empowering or educational than the act of 'doing', the direct experience of things. This is why dirty fingers should not be judged but celebrated instead - they are a sign of a healthy and respected childhood.

WHO WE ARE

Grapat started to form as an idea after the birth of our first daughter Lola. We realised how she didn't really need any off-the-shelf toys in order to play, and would use her ingeniousness to turn everyday objects into whatever she desired. Looking at how happy she was, we understood how there was no real need to buy and consume, more so, our presence was all that mattered – observing and living consciously.

After the birth of our second son Tomàs, we moved from the big city to the countryside in Jordi's family home, where we could integrate the slower way of life we had been longing for. We started to create and play with wood, and slowly the family home turned into a fully operational workshop where we would create the pieces with machinery installed in the barn and would stain them by hand with old sheets in the kitchen. This is when Grapat finally materialised - Grapat means "a handful" in Catalan, the native language of our land.

Grapat has grown a lot since then, spreading globally over 62 countries and needing more and more production space every year, but it is still – and always will be – a family project. It is the manifestation of our way of life and our vision for the future we believe in. This is why we still have an active role in every aspect of the company, that we treat as if it was another child in the family. We still create new pieces and prototypes out of clay or beeswax, we still communicate with the world using our authentic voice and we keep staining our pieces by hand in-house. We know well what boundaries we need to respect, as overcoming them in order to grow quicker would simply not be who we are. We believe in an organic growth that happens inevitably but consciously, at a sustainable rhythm. Conscious living also involves the human factor: taking care of the community is taking care of the environment, so every action and decision needs to be for the good of both.

Nature is both our clock and our muse. We live in rhythm with her, respecting her, and she is our design inspiration for every new piece we create. Our true, main inspiration though, is children - we like to think that we are at the service of childhood. With Grapat, we want to make sure that every child has a free and respectful upbringing, filled with playtimes that are open-ended and free from expectations or judgement. The pieces should invite and incite their own genuine flair for creation. For this, we offer elements without instructions nor limits. Our duty as parents is to protect this sacred moment, without interfering, just observing and being present. Our motto is "be free, play open!"

Every time another box leaves the factory, we think about how the children will share the best playtimes with our pieces, with the intention that they will last forever. Our aim is timeless: if our material gets passed on from one generation to another, then it means our purpose will have been fulfilled, and this is our hope and joy.

HOW WE WORK

We are in a lifelong love affair with Nature, we accept that we lack control over her so we simply observe and respect her. Our creations are an offering to her, not an attempt to modify her laws. Our goal is simplicity itself - when working on a product, we draw inspiration from its true natural form and then try to reduce it to the essential, detaching from the unnecessary, resorting to as little material as possible.

Wood is our element. It is warm and alive, it is soft and robust at the same time. Its irregular shapes and incomplete patterns make it unique and truly beautiful to our eyes. Its texture holds a wealth of information and hidden stories waiting to be discovered by the senses of every child. Over time, the wood will acquire subtle dents and scars, and that means that it has accomplished its very aim, providing children with hours and hours of free and open-ended play, and we deeply cherish that. The "imperfectness" of the wood makes each piece unique - just like us humans!

Our toys are produced according to traditional manufacturing processes and with locally-sourced sustainable materials.

Colour has the power to connect us to emotions and to everything that happens inside of us, this is why our colours come directly from nature and reconnect us to her. Each piece is stained by hand; working with dyes instead of acrylic paint allows us to keep in contact with the wood and its veins in a kind and noble way. The dye sinks deep into the surface of the wood without covering its beauty and giving an everlasting effect.

Depending on temperature, humidity and wind, the dye gets absorbed into the surface of the wood in different ways, but we appreciate this as it is another seal of authenticity and truthfulness.

Due to the excess of pigment, some pieces might lose colour when getting in touch with saliva, but this is absolutely fine as all colours are 100% safe and non-toxic. The elements are finished using waxes and oils of vegetable origin. The oils can have a strong aroma at first, but they soften with time. Enjoy it while it lasts!

As part of our engagement to sustainability, our packaging has been 100% free of plastic since 2019. We use cardboard boxes for all our products to contribute to the reduction of waste on the planet. We actually encourage the reuse of the packaging itself, as it can become an integral part of the play. We are also continually making changes and improvements towards this direction in all of our production and shipping processes, sharing every step in total transparency through our social media platforms.

Social responsibility is part of our way of life, so we collaborate with foundations that take care of people with physical or mental disabilities who help us to develop packaging tasks. We are also active in giving back to society by supporting different charities and humanitarian projects.

When forming the company, we didn't want to use a traditional business model. We don't believe in pyramidal structures so we shaped it according to a sociocratic philosophy. We practice self-management and shared authority. Family conciliation with work is a topic that we take special care of, so the working schedule of each employee is adapted to everyone's personal needs. Happy work is better work!

CERTIFICATIONS

The dyes are water based and non toxic. The colours and their appearance might vary slightly, like nature itself.

The wood we use comes from sustainable forests and holds the certification PEFC 14-35-00485.

The finishes are made with wax and oils of vegetable origin.

Some of our products include cotton bags. All the fabrics have a GOTS Certificate (Global Organic Textile Standard) as they are produced ecologically and with social responsibility.

All of our collaborators and suppliers are of proximity, located in Europe. In this way we can know about the way of working and can ensure fair working conditions.

The workshop is structured according to the TEAL philosophy. It's based on self-management, fulfilment and personal growth.

All our packaging is 100% plastic free. We also produce the boxes with a heavy-weight cardboard that ensures the life of the box for approximately 5 years. We consider our boxes as part of the toy.

Most of our products are in one piece. In spite of this, some elements need the use of glue for their assembly. The glue used is 100% formaldehyde free.

All our products are manufactured and tested in accordance with the safety requirements of the European (EN71 1-2-3), American (ASTM) Toy Safety Standards, and ISO8124.

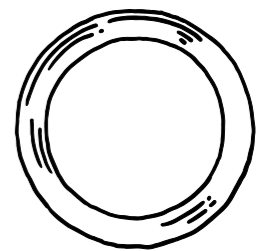

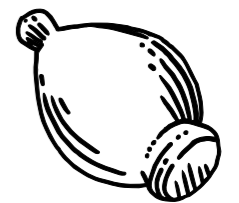

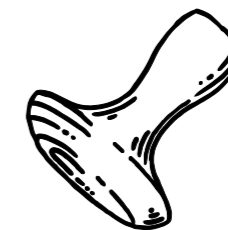

SETS

Our proposal for the playsets favours creative and divergent thinking. Free play allows our children to connect with their deepest desire and develop the activity they need.

Unstructured and open-ended play material doesn't have a correct or incorrect way to be used, so we work without instructions.

Our materials are open to allow children to navigate themselves through all their learning phases. The pieces can be transformed into symbolic material for the creation of stories and the construction of small worlds, but can also lend themselves for mathematical, language or sensory games.

LOOSE PARTS

Our collection of loose parts is intended as a complement to the sets, although the pieces can also be used separately.

Based on the theory of the loose parts by Simon Nicholson in 1971, we propose a rich play object, unstructured and open-ended. It allows the child to combine, align, carry, transport, stack or classify in different ways.

The loose parts allow children to redesign and reformulate. They can also be combined with objects found outside, in nature, to favour contact with our closest environment.

Loose parts can be used for multiple purposes. There is no one single specific way to use them and there is no right or wrong way to play with them.

All loose parts are presented in the range of colours of the rainbow, their tones allowing us to connect with nature.

The Mandala collection invites children to create mandalas, individually or collectively. They can also be used to create pictures and representations.

We chose the amount of 36 in order to make round creations. Depending on the needs of the kids, they can enrich symbolic play, they can be used as food for cooking or elements to transport.

When the kids are older and in the phase of concrete learning, Mandala pieces can be of help with counting, lining up, or creating letters ... just let them surprise you!
