How to germinate

Cannabis Seeds

Germinating cannabis seeds is a relatively easy process. However, there are certain basics that every cultivator must keep in mind from the beginning. Remember that seeds are living organisms, and your growing environment is, in fact, a “nursery” in every sense of the word. Everything you use should be sanitized, including your hands. Make sure everything is clean!

What your seeds really need to thrive is a warm and humid environment. The optimal temperature is about 20°C. Light is not necessary during the initial stage of germination. Once they begin to grow, their first root – known as the tap root – will seek out for moisture in order to get your seedlings off to a healthy start.

Easy Start: The easy way to get seeds off to a strong start

To ensure the strongest start possible, you can use a Easy Start kit. It offers everything needed to germinate cannabis seeds. It comes with 20 small seed pots filled with Easy Start soil and a packet of Bacto Mix. The stimulator is not a fertilizer, but instead, activates the essential microbial life within the compost. This, in turn, supports healthy root growth helping your seedlings be the best they can be! All you need is some water, and of course, some seeds, and you’re ready to grow.

Plant your seed using the Easy Start Kit in an environment that is warm and humid. When you see the roots appearing on the bottom, gently remove the seedling protected by the Easy Start soil from its soil pot and replant it in a larger pot. We particularly recommend this option as it is the safest and the most error-free way to germinate seeds, particularly for those new to the cultivation process.

Other ways to germinate seeds

There are a few other ways to germinate seeds in addition to the Easy Start method. Here are three more techniques which people around the world commonly use with good results.

2.

Place the seed in damp cotton wool or between moistened paper towels and wait until the root starts to break through its shell. When you see that the seed has opened and the root comes out, carefully place the seedling in your planting pot, with the root pointing down. Keep the soil warm and humid.

3.

Put the seed into a glass of water, which you should replace on a daily basis. Water temperature should be about 20°C. Within 3-7 days you will see the first root coming out, indicating the seed is germinating. As soon as the sprout is 2-3mm long, remove the seed from the water, poke a small hole in your soil (around 0.5cm deep) and lightly cover the seedling within it. Placing a fluorescent light over the pot will provide the light and warmth required to continue to grow.

* Although there are other methods used for germination, the ones presented above ensure the highest success rate and the most control over the germination process. If you have any doubts about the processes described, feel free to visit our grow blog for more tips.

Alternatively, the seed can be planted directly in soil. Simply plant it 0.5cm below the surface and cover over lightly. Ensure that the environment remains warm (roughly 20°C) and humid. The soil needs to remain humid, but not over saturated, as waterlogging can cause the roots to rot. Even though this is a classic method of sowing, it is more difficult to control every factor while using this technique. That is why we recommend using the ones described earlier.

It is worth noting that seeds and seedlings do not need to be fertilized – only use plain water. Seeds are very vulnerable to overfeeding. Adding extra fertilizers can cause a nutrient build-up in the soil, causing burns and killing your seedlings! So, don't do it!

Feminized cannabis seeds are designed to produce only female plants.

Usually, a cannabis seed can develop into a male or female plant; the entire process is determined by the sex expressing X and Y chromosomes. "Feminization" is a process of conditioning female plants to obtain male pollen needed for seed production.

A plant with two X chromosomes will be female 99% of the time, while regular cannabis seeds (XY genetic set) sometimes have a tendency to produce more male than female individuals.

Shogun

Amnesia Haze X Gorilla Glue #4

We created Shogun from two very different cultivars. On one side we have Amnesia Haze, a THC-laden sativa classic, and on the other is the beastly Gorilla Glue #4, which balances both sativa and indica characteristics.

Out comes a sativa-leaning (70% sativa) hybrid with remarkable cerebral effects. A great daytime cultivar for all things creative, but also splendid before physical activities and chores. Pungent earthy and pine flavour notes come as a major bonus.

AUTOFLOWERING Seeds

Autoflowering strains offer great yields in record speed.

Unlike photoperiod strains, these plants don't need a change in the light cycle to begin flowering. Instead, the cannabis ruderalis gene means they flower automatically after a certain time, making them more simple to grow.

Modern autoflowering genetics produce THC levels and yields that rival their photoperiod counterparts. What's more, they produce impressive harvests in a matter of weeks. Prepare to sample your personal stash 8-10 weeks after germination. Their compact nature also makes them ideal for growers that value stealth. Cultivate them in small indoor growing tents or outdoor guerilla growing locations to keep your horticultural hobby private.

Although Sweet ZZ features a long list of desirable traits, her tantalizing tastes and dazzling odours certainly steal the show. By crossing flavourful parent strains Grape Ape and Grapefruit, we managed to create a terpene profile that mimics biting directly into a fresh, juicy, and sweet orange.

Respectable THC levels of 22% build off this solid sensory foundation and invite sensations of euphoria, self-reflection, and deep philosophical thought into the equation. This indica lady grows busy, but with a pair of pruning shears and some LST, she'll form a neat and abundant canopy loaded with dense aromatic flowers.

Green Gelato Automatic

Green Gelato x Cookies Auto

Green Gelato Automatic marks the future of autoflowering genetics. In the past, many growers considered autos as fast strains that exchange speed for potency and yield. Although they were right, things have changed. Green Gelato Automatic belongs to a new generation of autos that outrival photoperiods in many areas. She packs a significant THC content of 24% and impressive indoor yields of up to 450g/m². What's more: she's super easy to grow and resilient to beginner error and fluctuating climates. Growers can expect to experience her intense high in less than 8 weeks after germinating seeds.

What is THCv?

THCV, also known as tetrahydrocannabivarin, also stems from the "mother cannabinoid acid" CBGA. As an analogue of THC, THCv bears a similar structure but has a different mechanism of action in the body. THCv works to block the receptor that THC activates, resulting in unique effects.

CBD OILS

CBD oil contains several cannabis phytochemicals, including the non-psychoactive molecule cannabidiol as well as terpenes. Royal Queen Seeds offers a range of different preparations including a variety of concentrations, cannabinoid profiles, and carrier oils.

OLIVE OIL

Rich in monounsaturated fats, CBD readily dissolves into our high-quality olive oil.

HEMP SEED OIL

As another component of cannabis, hemp seed oil serves as a holistic carrier.

MCT OIL

A natural product, medium-chain triglyceride (MCT) oil derives from coconuts.

¿WHAT IS CBD?

Known as cannabidiol, CBD belongs to a chemical family known as cannabinoids. Cannabis manufactures these chemicals in small, mushroom-shaped glands called trichomes, and exudes them in the form of a viscous resin. Alongside the likes of THC, this non-psychoactive cannabinoid forms one of the major components of cannabis flowers. As a fat-loving molecule, CBD absorbs very well into carrier oils.

¿AND CBG?

CBG, or cannabigerol, shares quite a few things in common with CBD. As well as belonging to the cannabinoid family, CBG is also non-psychoactive. Known as the “mother cannabinoid”, the molecule serves as the precursor to CBD and THC.
