fiVO Design Selected as ISFD Innovation + Design Finalist

High Point, N.C. – Stewart and Deanna Junge of fiVO Design ("fiVO"), a Massachusetts based furniture designer and manufacturer, were selected as finalists for the 2023 International Society of Furniture Designers ("ISFD") Innovation + Design Awards. The juried competition is designed to showcase the products and designs of the top independent furnishings' makers in the seating, occasional tables, occasional storage, lighting, accessories, and dining room furniture categories.

"Storage is at the top of most consumers' wish lists but users are often forced to adjust, in some way, to the inherent limitations of a piece of furniture. Our modular design frees the user from those limitations, as it quickly and easily adapts as the user's space or needs change. We are honored to be acknowledged by the esteemed panel of judges for our innovative design," states Deanna Junge, fiVO's Director, Leader, and Creative.

fiVO's Walnut + Birch Buffet Bar, occasional storage finalist, utilizes their patent pending Infiniti Joinery System that assembles without the use of any tools or hardware. The piece provides flexible storage that can be used for multiple purposes. In addition to the innovative construction technique, select parts are digitally printed with a Walnut wood grain, a sustainable alternate to using wood veneer.

"The Innovation + Design competition celebrates and honors the work of some of the most creative minds and finest artisans working in home furnishings today. The entry from fiVO Design was selected by our panel of judges based on originality, craftsmanship, functionality, construction technique, and aesthetic appeal. This is the second time in a row that Stewart and Deanna have qualified as finalists, and we are thrilled to welcome them back," shares David Blair, ISFD Executive Director.

fiVO's Walnut + Birch Buffet Bar and works of other Innovation + Design finalists will be on exhibit at the Art Gallery at Congdon Yards in High Point from April 13-26, 2023.
