Lunchtime Shop: What We're Buying Today

You have 60 minutes, spend them wisely.

BY HANNAH BANKS-WALKER | POSTED 17 MINUTES AGO

Some days (okay, four out of five), our lunch break is spent sitting at our desks staring down an ever-growing inbox while we fork at yesterday's leftovers. Bleak. As over half of us (52 per cent) are already spending this hour-off surfing the web we might as well be productive about it.

It's now January and we're still reeling from a global pandemic that has floored businesses and continues to produce much uncertainty for us all. The need for distraction has never been greater. That's why, rather than seeing shopping as something frivolous and unnecessary right now, it can actually be a great way to keep a grip on your 'normal' routine and, of course, help the economy.

To make matters more complicated, however, we are of course still battling with climate change and the need to reduce our levels of consumption has never been more urgent. That's why this Lunchtime Shop will bring you all the best pieces that you can wear season after season. After all, with an increasing awareness of fast fashion's impact on our planet, it's necessary to make smart purchases; things that will be in your wardrobe forever, and that you'll always love wearing.

From the best of the wear-forever high street buys to the most beautiful pieces from all of your favourite designers, these are the things worth investing in. If a lunch break is really the only thing worth looking forward to on some work days, you may as well make it extra special...

Lunchtime Shop: What To Buy Today

Tuesday – Monica Vinader, Nesting Dishes, £75

Monica Vinader, the jewellery brand loved by everyone from the Duchess of Cambridge to Hailey Bieber, has today launched homewares for the first time. A collaboration with ceramicist Florence St George, the collection is made up of four sets of nesting bowls inspired by the vibrant Bahamian coast. While you could use them to house your jewels, they'll also look great on any shelf, in the kitchen or even on a coffee table. Be quick – they're already selling fast.
