MemoryMaker

Souvenir collector

A design solution that finally finds a place for all those small objects you have collected and brought back from your travels. Objects you probably haven't even purchased, small things you may have slipped between the pages of a travel guide. Objects you may have kept in your pocket for hours and then decided to carry back home in your suitcase or backpack.

Little things you were particularly struck by, that thrilled you and you ended up growing fond of. They now come out of your drawers, boxes or bookshelves, and become elements of a composition that is also a "gateway" to the emotion of traveling.

A "dynamic" frame for your best travel memories.

Out of the drawer,
straight on the wall!

Designer / Sebastian Bergne

Humble and disposable objects have always been of interest, particularly when travelling. Something very familiar at home, becomes interesting and different when in a new place, experiencing something special. These objects often find their way back home in pockets and books, only to linger waiting to be appreciated again. When stuck at home during the lockdowns of the first Covid wave, I revisited some of these objects as a way to travel and reflect on the notion of the souvenir. It was then that the MemoryMaker was born. An easy way to order, keep and appreciate the simple things that remind us of special times.
