

Former Buccaneer Vincent Jackson hosts annual baby shower for military moms

TAMPA, Fla. - On Sunday, 40 Bay Area moms, expecting or recently delivered, were showered with gifts and support as former Buccaneers wide receiver Vincent Jackson and his wife hosted their annual Military Mom's Baby Shower through the Jackson in Action 83 Foundation.

Members of the military and their families are the ones sacrificing everything to serve our country and keep us safe, but sometimes our heroes need help too.

"These are mostly young military families, unfortunately, people don't understand they don't make a ton, and it's expensive raising a child," said Vincent Jackson, a former Buccaneers player and the founder of the Jackson in Action 83 Foundation.

Through the Jackson in Action 83 Foundation, expecting and new military moms were gifted with thousands of dollars worth of baby supplies and furniture.

"We got strollers, we have car seats, diapers, diaper bags, we're just trying to bless them with all those little small details," said Jackson.