A versatile bedside sleeper

If you think a standard crib will be enough, think again. You'll need a great bedside sleeper for your baby to get you through the first especially-tiring months, especially if you plan to breastfeed. Babies wake up every two to three hours in the beginning, and the last thing you'll want to do is head off to another room. The Simmons Kids by Delta Children Room2Grow Newborn Bassinet to Infant Sleeper has a small footprint to keep your bedroom clutter-free, easily fits a newborn, and comes in an on-trend gray and white color scheme. Better yet, it's at the top of our newborn baby shopping list because the sleeping base is adjustable so you can use it even as your baby approaches toddlerhood.
