

New stroller restrictions at Disney parks: What parents need to know

If you're planning a trip to Disneyland or Disneyworld this summer you better check the size of your stroller.

Disney just announced that large strollers and stroller wagons are now banned from the parks. This means strollers that are "greater than 31" (79 cm) in width and 52" (132cm) in length" won't be allowed into either the Florida or California Disney parks.

"These updates are designed to help guest flow and ease congestion, making the parks more enjoyable for everyone," Lisa Mendillo, the Communications Manager for Walt Disney World Resort writes in a blog post.

Plenty of strollers (even some doubles and joggers) are small enough that they will still be allowed into Disney parks, but if you've got a big rig, you might want to swap it for an umbrella-style stroller before your visit, or just rent a Disney-approved stroller when you get to the park.
