If you know you're only going to use a toddler bed for a few years, you might not want to invest much money in it—and that's totally fine! All toddler beds sold in the U.S. are subject to the same safety regulations. You can rest assured your child will be just as safe in a less-expensive bed than a splurge-y one.

You just might get the biggest bang for your buck from a bed decorated in your child's favorite characters! This is especially true for a child who's having trouble with the idea of giving up his crib. A bed that has a few friendly faces from his favorite shows might be enough incentive to try the big-kid bed—and hopefully, stay in it!

The Delta Children Plastic Toddler Bed fits all those needs. It's very affordable and is available in 26 colorful styles. Whether you have a Disney Princess lover or a Ninja Turtles fan, you're sure to find the perfect bed for your little one.

- Best for Twins: Delta Children Abby Toddler Bed

If you're upgrading twins from cribs to toddler beds, you're probably on the lookout for space-saving options. Unfortunately, at this age, your children are too young for bunk beds (you'll have to wait until they're at least five for those).

Until you can get two beds in the space for one, look for a streamlined pair of beds. Two Delta Children Abby Toddler Beds can be tucked up against each other if your twins like to sleep together. They can also be separated without losing too much floor space if your twins tend to keep each other up.

This classic bed has minimal rails, no footboard, and no flourishes to take up extra space. It allows both children to be comfortable in the most compact way.
