With some baby essentials, there's less of a difference between the low-cost versions and the luxury versions than you might think. Take baby strollers, for example. Some of the best models under $400 still pack in a lot of the bells and whistles you'll want to keep your little one cruising along in comfort and style (especially if you don't plan to use your stroller on a daily basis). But don't take our word alone on these top budget picks. Before finalizing our list, we also checked in with our parents in our What to Expect community who've spent years using these affordable favorites for their take on what makes them just so amazing.

Why We Love It

If you don't want winter weather to stop you from venturing out, particularly in places where there's snow on the ground many months out of the year, the J is for Jeep Brand Adventure All-Terrain Jogging Stroller may be the stroller for you. In fact, paganmom2013 responded to a post from a fellow parent in Canada seeking the best stroller for snowy conditions. She said: "It's 3-wheeled and has tires with big, thick tread so it can easily go on beach, uneven terrain, and snow. It's been a lifesaver for me!"
