Boron in high doses is similar to lower dosed proviron. It's not a prescription med, but then neither is masteron. How high are we talking about? Mesterolone, known also by the brand name Proviron, is a compound that's very similar to Masteron - as you might be able to tell from their similar names. Mesterolone is an orally active compound that's similar to dihydrotestosterone.

Specifically, it's a 1-methylated dihydrotestosterone molecule. In many ways, Proviron is a very unique anabolic steroid. It shares some strong similarities to Masteron (Drostanolone) and to a degree Anavar (Oxandrolone) and Winstrol (Stanozolol) but in totality it is its own unique animal. A: Proviron (oral 1-methyl-dihydrotestosterone) and Masteron (an injectable form of 2-methyl-dihydrotestosterone) are indeed structurally very similar. Both are DHT hormones with a minor modification (methylation) on each. This similarity, however, doesn't carry over extremely closely when it comes to function.
