Enjoy an authentic Finnish sauna experience in the TAIVE sauna

Cariitti is a well-known Finnish manufacturer of sauna and SPA lighting, and since 2018 we have also manufactured TAIVE sauna benches and panels. This year, our selection is completed with sauna cabins.

The TAIVE sauna creates a pleasant sauna experience for all the senses: the design of the sauna is smooth and elegant, the lighting creates pleasant atmosphere, and functional air ventilation guarantees nice sauna session and good feeling for the sauna bathers. The TAIVE sauna combines timeless design, modern technology and traditional sauna know-how and creates an authentic Finnish sauna experience.

The collection is made of Finnish birch plywood lined with Hemlock or CWP birch plywood. All adhesive binding is made with weatherproof D4 glue with emission class M1. The structure guarantees very high stress strength and low deformation from moisture.

Proper air ventilation is an essential part of the sauna experience

In well-functioning sauna ventilation, fresh air is led in from above the stove, so that it mixes more effectively with the warm air and does not remain at the floor level. This way, the sauna bathing is pleasant and there is enough oxygen for a longer sauna session. The exhaust air is led out with an exhaust fan under the benches near the floor level. With this kind of ventilation, the temperature is higher also on the lower bench. The speed of the exhaust fan is adjustable. In addition, there is an exhaust air valve in the ceiling of the sauna, which is kept closed during the sauna heating and sauna bathing. It is opened only after the sauna bathing, so that the sauna is ventilated well and dries faster.

The wall and ceiling elements are so-called "sandwich" construction, i.e. the space between the outer and inner surfaces is insulated with 45 mm non-combustible stone wool.

Take note of these 5 things as you plan a sauna – a recipe for a perfect sauna experience

You can start building a sauna with good confidence when the basics are clear. We gathered together five key things to consider when designing a sauna.

1. Sauna dimensions are the starting point of the design

The dimensions of the sauna space are the basis from which the sauna design starts. Many people believe that a very special sauna cannot be built in a small space, so the design is not being invested. However, the smaller the sauna, the more important it is to think about the use of space carefully and choose the right products. Rational solutions provide a feeling of space even for a small sauna.

2. The heater is selected according to the sauna size

Selecting the heater is an important step in the sauna design. There are many types of heaters available on the market, which differ in both their output and appearance. For example, a small sauna is not worth buying a large stove that requires a lot of surface area. Building authorities may also require the replacement of an oversized stove. So you should choose a carefully sized heater for your sauna.

3. Ventilation of the sauna

The well-designed sauna ventilation ensures the best possible sauna experience. The ventilation of the sauna should be carried out in such a way that the exhaust air outlets are in two places, on the ceiling and under the benches. The outlet on the ceiling is closed during the sauna and is opened after the sauna. The best place to replace the supply air outlet is above the stove, where the fresh air spreads along with the heat produced by the stove. When ventilation works well in the sauna, oxygen is sufficient and the toes remain warm, so it's longer to enjoy.

4. The best benches are practical and pleasant to the eye

The benches are selected according to the surface area and number of bathers. How many people go to the sauna at the same time? Corner benches are popular, but they are usually not the best solution for a small sauna. Instead of adding more seats, corner benches actually take up the seating space.

The design and comfort influence on the purchase decision, since the high-quality benches keep their value for many years. The choice of benches is also influenced by the need for an embedded heater. In addition, when buying benches, you should consider the practicality and hygiene – how easily the elements can be removed for washing?

5. Sauna Lighting brings atmosphere

Lighting in the sauna creates an atmosphere and can, for example, emphasize the sauna surfaces. Smooth and harmonious lighting can be achieved by placing the lights behind the backrest or under the benches. You should bear in mind that good lighting also increases the safety of the sauna.
