Benefits of Drinking Water Stored in Copper Bottle / Jug

When water is stored in a copper bottle, for eight hours or more, copper releases some of its ions in the water, through a process called Oligodynamic effect. Copper is known to have antimicrobial, anti-inflammatory, anti-carcinogenic and antioxidant properties. It assists in the formation of haemoglobin as well as cell regeneration. Unfortunately, the human body cannot create the trace amounts of copper it requires to function healthily. Therefore copper has to be a part of our intake either through food or water. The human body benefits in several other ways with the presence of copper. Here are some amazing health benefits of drinking water from a copper bottle:

- Helps Cardiovascular System
- Controls Ageing
- Increases Brain Efficiency
- Prevents Stroke
- Helps in Weight Loss
- Aids in Healing Wounds Faster
- Fights Cancer
- Controls Hypertension
- Aids in Functioning of Thyroid Gland
- Prevents Anemia
- Cures Arthritis and Inflamed Joints
- Increases Immunity against Infection
- Assists in Digestion

What is Bronze?

Bronze (Also known as Kansa) is used as utensil in India since centuries. Our Ayurveda has highly recommended these utensils for daily use. Bronze is a mixture of Copper (Cu) and Tin (Sn). It fulfills the necessity of copper and tin in human body. Bronze is mentioned as a 'Shudh Dhatu' in Vedas, therefore it is used in worship of GOD. Originally it was made for serving food.

Health Benefits of Copper

The health benefits of copper include proper growth of the body, efficient utilization of iron, proper enzymatic reactions, as well as improved health of connective tissues, hair, and eyes, Copper is also integral for preventing premature aging and increasing energy production. Apart from these, regulated heart rhythm, balanced thyroid glands, reduced symptoms of arthritis, quick wound healing, increased red blood cell formation and reduced cholesterol are other health benefits of copper. The health benefits of copper are crucial for an overall healthy existence, as this mineral enables normal metabolic process in association with amino acids and vitamins. Copper cannot be produced within the body and therefore needs to be added from external food sources. Copper is the third most prevalent mineral in the body and it is mostly carried by the blood plasma protein, Ceruloplasmin.

Health Benefits of Tin (Sn)

Tin (Sn) is an element vital to humans general health. Daily intake of tin ranges from 1 to 3 mg. In the past when tin cans and pans were used, tin intake was ten times more. Researchers have shown that insufficiency of tin can cause reduced growth, loss of hearing, loss of hair and reduced feeding efficiency. Lack of tin may result in depression and fatigue while adding tin boosts energy and has positive effects on the mood. It can be also helpful with headaches, insomnia, digestion and skin problems as well as different pains and aches.
