

Helping create safer working environments for the

AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY

The automotive industry is a great place to work. But it has its own unique challenges when it comes to managing dangerous goods to maintain workplace safety and reduce risks to staff, the community, and the environment.

From workshops to car grooming bays, the solvents, aerosols, oil, fuels, gas, batteries, and other flammables used daily demand specialist storage, containment, and control and clean-up. That's more than just common sense and health and safety. It's also to protect businesses from issues with compliance and the potential loss of insurance.

We're not talking about cowboys here.

Even the most meticulously run business has to anticipate and actively plan for incidents. We're all human and we all make mistakes. And, uncontrolled, a relatively small spill can escalate from a slipping hazard into something much worse.

Hazero's products cover almost every eventuality. From containing leaking battery acid to preventing aerosol theft and misuse. And from compliantly storing fuel and gas canisters, to cleaning up overflows and drips, and protecting drains from contamination. They're also proven. One of our 250L Chemshed Flammable Cabinets is purchased in New Zealand practically every day of the working week.

That's because Hazero not only understands dangerous goods but also everything that goes on around them. Like the need to keep workplaces clean and tidy. (Which is why we provide options like under bench storage.) And, why there are scalable solutions at every level to make work and compliance easier for staff, along with signage and procedure guides to jog memories when something does go wrong.

We've highlighted a few relevant products that will help improve your workplace safety culture and compliance.

But there's lots more besides.
