Howard Butterworth

Born in Rochdale in 1945, Howard is a renowned Scottish Artist and has lived and painted professionally in Northern Scotland since 1968. He captures the atmospheric light and colours of Scotland in all its moods and seasons as only an artist painting outdoors can. Painting mostly in oils, 'en plein air', Howard's description of his style of painting as "emotional realism" conveys the sense of being in a particular place at a particular moment in time and the experience and feeling of Nature's constantly changing colours and light.

Over the years he has painted and exhibited frequently in Scotland and Spain - to where he travelled across Europe to paint the almond blossom each spring. His work has increased in popularity worldwide, particularly his paintings of Scotland including those of native birchwoods, Caledonian pine forests, heather covered moorland and snowcapped mountains with the lively waters and bridges of Royal Deeside, Aberdeenshire. Equally popular are his oil paintings and watercolour paintings of the West Coast, historic castles, harbours, and city street scenes. Howard's patrons include private and corporate buyers with several works featuring in the Royal Collections of H.M. Queen Elizabeth and Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother who closely supported him over the years.

The family business, Butterworth Studios Ltd., produces high quality reproductions of his paintings along with a range of giftware, all of which are available to buy online.
