This Earth Day, the call for us to adopt a more sustainable way of life is loud and clear. If you've swapped out your single-use plastic straws and disposable food containers for reusable ones, you're off to a good start.

However, there are many other ways that you can cut down on waste, with one big one being to reduce the amount of beauty product packaging you throw away (yes, beauty junkies, we're talking to you).

Whether it's empty lipstick compacts or skincare jars that have no more room on your shelves, beauty packaging that's thrown away contributes to over 120 billion units of waste each year.

The good news is that more brands are creating refillable beauty products that allow us to stock up again on the skincare or makeup we love, without having to toss the casings.

It's not the ultimate solution to our climate problem, but opting for refillable beauty products, especially when it comes to the go-to ones that we reach for time and time again, does make a difference for our planet.

So, to help you search for the right products to add to (and keep on) your dressing table, we've rounded up 13 refillable beauty products that you can consider this Earth Day.

The Powder Shampoo Strengthening & Soothing Shampoo

Meet our new favourite homegrown vegan haircare brand, The Powder Shampoo. It's all in the name – this shampoo starts off as a powder, but when you add water to it, it transforms into a soft foam that lathers and cleanses your hair and scalp just effectively as liquid shampoos do.

The formula has deliberately left out water, which revolutionises the way we shampoo. Free of harsh sulphates, parabens, phthalates, and silicones, all four variants are formulated with plant-powered, naturally-derived ingredients and housed in aluminium bottles.

Its Strengthening & Soothing Shampoo is great for those with normal hair and a sensitive scalp. Enriched with sweet and zesty Grapefruit Essential Oil, it removes impurities like pollution, pollen, dust, and chlorine, while Licorice Root Extract stimulates hair growth.
