

HOLLIE FERNANDO

A collaboration between Setanta Books and Open Doors Gallery

HOLLIE FERNANDO

Hollie Fernando is a British photographer based in Brighton. Having learned the basics whilst she was at sixth form, Hollie continued to learn whilst taking up commercial jobs after she left school.

Her work takes inspiration from classical paintings and continues to be imbued by the colour palettes, lighting styles and symbolic features. Whether she is shooting famous musicians and actors or siblings and friends, she uses the same relaxed approach.

Hollie chooses to shoot on analogue film and hand prints most of her work in the darkroom using certain colour references. She then takes these prints and digitises them using a second layer of colour references from her previous work. Hollie goes to great lengths to create her unique style and visual identity.

"I try to keep all the colours in my work consistent to create my very own fantasy world."

• • 3 MICHAEL MCCLUSKEY

Michael is a consummate storyteller with a cinematic eye. The images included in this publication are scenes to stories that only you the viewer can complete. One day Michael plans to make movies but for now these stills are yours to plot the beginning, middle and end.

A lot of my photos are captured from the side of the road somewhere in Northern Michigan. Usually only 2-3 hours from where I live. You'd be surprised at the things you find when you go looking.

• • 2 MARGARET DUROW

Margaret was born in rural Wisconsin, 1989 and began exploring her photographic style from a young age. Therefore, she has developed a unique ability to capture the magic in the landscapes she grew up in. By exploring the transient nature of memory, Durow uses photography as a tool to preserve a feeling. Hence, giving her work an intimate and insightful quality as she documents the world around her.

"I take pictures to remember how I feel, and I hope they make you feel something personal for yourself."
