

A large crowd of people is gathered on the steps of the National Gallery in London. The scene is set during the day under a clear blue sky. A pigeon is captured in mid-flight, its wings spread wide, flying across the upper portion of the frame. The National Gallery building, with its classical architecture and columns, is visible in the background. A red banner with the text 'NATIONAL GALLERY' is hanging from one of the columns. The overall atmosphere is festive and public.

BRILLIANT PARADE

Brilliant Parade - Josh Edgoose

Brilliant Parade by British photographer Josh Edgoose is a celebration of the character and energy of the streets of London through the serendipitous interactions that happen every day and usually go unnoticed. Edgoose spent five years observing and photographing the encounters and moods of the city, capturing its colourful, ever-changing essence. He strived to organise the chaotic scenes in order to discover the disposition of a city that contains everything in its vast magnitude. Edgoose takes the different pieces of this metropolis and seamlessly puts them together, showing us its secrets.

In Brilliant Parade, bold colours, gestures, notes of humour and emotion intertwine to build a portrait of London's iconic streets, giving us a feel for the rhythm of a city that moves fast and is the grandiose stage for a diverse cast of characters who inadvertently fill the frame and get right under the spotlight in Edgoose's candid street photographs.
