Dear Hasan

I extend my greetings to you. I am writing these few lines while sitting in one of the beautiful public parks that are widespread across London. With me in this park, which is near the famous British Houses of Parliament, is my friend Ahmad with whom I am staying. We will be going together to visit the historic royal palace. Then we will be going to the British Museum before visiting the Islamic Cultural Centre in West London, where we will pray salat al-maghrib (the prayer just after sunset), God willing.

The weather is very cold today. Most parts of Britain have been experiencing snowfall for the past two days. The streets and the roofs of the buildings are covered with snow. I saw a snow plough clearing away the snow that had accumulated in the streets. I also saw council workers spreading grit on London's roads to prevent cars from skidding and having accidents.

The house of my friend Ahmed, as is the case with most British houses, is equipped with central heating. Behind the house is a large garden of flowers.

In spite of the fact that the weather is very wet and the rain is falling constantly, I am nevertheless having a wonderful time here in London.

I will write to you again from London before I return to you in Damascus at the beginning of next month, God willing.

Convey my greetings to your family and our colleagues.

Yours sincerely,

Sabir

Exercise 16: (Page 49)

Translation

The negative effects of intoxicants on society

Doctors have expressed their concern at the escalation of the increase in the number of alcoholics. The British Medical Association explained in a report released the day before yesterday that the problem of alcoholism and drug addiction is a time bomb threatening the cohesion and welfare of society. The Association added that the government is closing its eyes to this serious problem.

The head of the Association has asked people to put pressure on the government to ban the advertising of alcohol on television. Commenting on this subject, the head of police praised the clear warning given by the doctors on the dangers of alcohol and drugs. He pointed out that alcohol and drugs destroy feelings and minds, cause chaos and unrest, and lead people to commit heinous crimes. The head of police condemned the new law approved recently by the British parliament that legalised the sale and purchase of alcohol in bars and shops around the clock.
