

Varilite Reflex Cushion

The Reflex Cushion is self-adjusting, great for users with risk of tissue breakdown. The cushion is made up of a medium density foam for optimal positioning and firm foam positioning supports to provide lateral support and a medial thigh separator. The foam is perforated for maximum protection of the pressure sensitive areas. The Reflex uses a self-setting valve that automatically releases a portion of air when the user sits on the cushion. The air-release allows a fixed amount of immersion to provide comfort and stability, and allows the foam to conform to the users shape.
